Serving the San Diego State University Community

'It's the anger and rage that keep me going'

Mother of slain student, prosecutor react to murder conviction

By JENNIFER LANZA Daily Aztec Staff Writer

To the friends and family of San Diego State University student Andrea O'Donnell, justice was served when the man charged with her death was found guilty of murder Aug. 9.

Andres L. English-Howard, 30, was convicted of firstdegree murder for the November death of O'Donnell, his live-in girlfriend. According to prosecuting attorney Peter L. Gallagher, the testimony given by English-Howard was inconsistent.

English-Howard said he was on drugs and therefore not in a sound state of mind at the time of the murder.

However, Gallagher said English-Howard could clearly recall too much of the events prior to and after the murder to have been under the influence of drugs.

According to Gallagher, during the trial English-Howard remembered fighting with O'Donnell, strangling her, calling a taxi and packing his bags for a trip to Santa Cruz, where he fled after the murder.

"The things he said were not consistent with being wacked out," Gallagher said. "I didn't believe his story." Mark Carlos, defending attorney, could not be reached. Leslie Lane, O'Donnell's mother, said English-Howard displayed a "poor me" attitude during the trial.

Lane also said she didn't see any truth in English-Howard's testimony. Lane said she didn't believe that an argument English-Howard had with O'Donnell led to her daughter's "accidental" death.

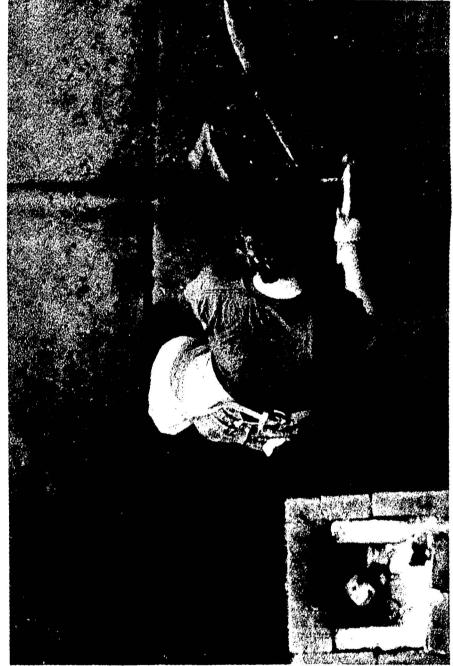

According to Lane, O'Donnell wasn't the type of person to engage in arguments that would lead to violence.

"Andrea was dead asleep when he got her," she said. "If she had been in any kind of conscious state, she would have been able to defend herself."

Heavy traffic less than past semesters

By RHONDA FONTES Daily Aztec Asst. City Editor

A lthough officials from Facilities Planning and Management anticipate heavy traffic during the first weeks of school, officials still expect less congestion than previous semesters.

All parking structures are now complete. However, due to construction on the Student Activity Center there are still three parking lots closed to students.

Construction of the SAC has eaten up Lots K, L and M, located on the east side of 55th Street across from Peterson Gym.

Losing Lots K, L and M will have an impact on parking because students will lose an estimated 800 parking spaces, according to Larry Piper, Facilities and Transportation planner.

"For the duration of the SAC construction, those lots will be closed," he said. "It will have an impact because those spaces will be lost for a couple of years, or when the SAC is completed – which ever comes first."

Parking Structure II, located on the north side of Lindo Paseo, was a general student lot. But now, only students in the extended studies program may park there.

"At one point, it was a general student lot," Piper said. "But students have more parking today than they have ever had in the history of San Diego State University. We have more than most in the California State University system."

Greek houses still playing musical chairs

This sight is not a new phenomenon at San Diego State University, since many of the fraternity houses have moved over the summer and will be setting up shop in new locations this fall. The two most obvious changes though are the relocation of Beta Thea Pi and Phi Kappa Psi. Permits voided after sheriff discovers fake property owner

By DAWNE BROOKS

Asst. Stanza Editor

The Global Underworld Network regretfully announced Friday the postponement of its annual Narnia festival – originally scheduled for last Saturday evening in Ramona – citing a fraudulent contract with an individual posing as the venue's owner. "Basically, we were lied to by the supposed property owner," said Branden Powers, co-founder of The Global Underworld Network. "He signed a contract representing the property and took off with all our money.

"We didn't find out until (Thursday) night – and at the eleventh hour. It was too late to obtain permits for a new location."

No refunds for the Aug. 26 event are being given at this time since the promoters are currently trying to find a new location and reschedule the event. Old tickets will still be honored. "We are in the process of rescheduling the event to a later date – probably within a month's time we will be able to," Powers said, "We already have several other locations. We just need to go through the permitting process one more time.

"It's been a big emotional drain. But we feel the festival's just going to be bigger and better because it has more time to grow."

The permits Global Underworld obtained for the first location were revoked by the San Diego Sheriff's Department

A.S. External Affairs sets agenda

Daily Aztec/DAN MCDOWELL Student activism helped legislators decide against raising fees, according to Guillermo Mayer, Associated Students vice president of external affairs.

Affirmative action, financial aid, remedial classes top list

By PAULETTE CANNON Daily Aztec Staff Writer

The Associated Students is headed in the right direction, said A.S. Vice President of External Affairs Guillermo Mayer.

"I think we're starting off on a good foot," Mayer said. "For the first time since 1986, (SDSU) has a victory on behalf of the students. We were able to successfully lobby the legislature and, as a result, no fee increase is included in this year's (state) budget."

With issues such as affirmative action, financial aid and the threat of remedial classes being cut from California State Universities, Mayer said he anticipates an active environment on campus for stronger student participation in politics.

"When it comes to issues like affirmative action, I think you'll see that San Diego State University will be very active in both trying to provide as much information as possible to educate students on the issues – as well as student activism ... whether it be through rallies, forums or demonstrations," Mayer said.

According to Mayer, many other issues will affect SDSU besides affirmative action. In particular, the proposal presented by the CSU Board of Trustees to eliminate remedial education to incoming freshmen.

Remedial education classes include the courses currently offered by the departments of rhetoric and writing and mathematics studies that provide incoming freshmen with the education necessary to meet English and math entrance requirements.

"This (proposal) is going to be affecting approximately 60 percent of all incoming freshmen coming directly from high school," Mayer said. "The Trustees have proposed to eliminate (remedial) classes and therefore create a new admissions requirement that if you do not pass, you will not be admitted to the system."

Because this new proposal will affect so many incoming freshmen, it will be necessary to educate as many students as possible about the issue, Mayer said. Furthermore, the next four months will be very critical since the Trustees will be taking action with the proposal.

Another issue that will affect students this semester is the selection of a new campus president. According to Mayer, a presidential search committee has been established.

Mayer said the committee includes A.S. President Mike Ashworth as well as several SDSU alumni, faculty, staff, community representatives and a couple members of the Trustees.

Currently, the committee is in closed session in an effort to keep the names of the applicants confidential. Furthermore, Mayer said Ashworth may be seeking student input as to which qualities they are looking for in a university president.

Mayer said he encourages open forums because he believes that student input is very important and should definitely be taken into consideration.

"I would sincerely encourage some type of open forum where students would be able to voice their concerns about what they've seen in the past several years and how they would like it to be improved and what kind of qualities they would want in a president."

Campus offers healthy food choices

By JENNIFER MARNIK Daily Aztec Staff Writer

hen we were younger, life was much easier. Mom made our lunch for our first day of school, packed it in our Snoopy lunch box and sent us off with a kiss.

Now it is not so easy. In the university setting, we are now adults, responsible for feeding ourselves. Not only do we have to concern ourselves with where and what we are going to eat, but also how to keep those 'freshman 10' from becoming the 'sophomore 20.'

The San Diego State University campus provides many opportunities for grabbing a good meal. However, there is a big difference between a good meal and a healthy meal. that provide a good source of energy for your long academic day.

"Don't let yourself get too hungry, because that is when people make inappropriate food choices, and tend to overeat," she said. "A large meal at midday may tend to make you drowsy for your afternoon classes. So eat a moderate-sized lunch and then smaller meals throughout the day." A good midday meal might consist of a turkey, tuna, or chicken sandwich on whole wheat bread, a piece of fresh fruit, and a carton of nonfat milk.

At the salad bar, avoid high-fat dressings and mayonnaise-based salads. Ennis advised munching on the following low-fat items throughout the day: low-fat microwave popcorn, bagels, pretzels, bananas, apples, and oranges. All are non-perishable and can easily be tossed in your backpack.

When students are on campus all day, it may be impossible to sit down for a balanced meal, forcing them to fill their stomachs with high-fat vending machine goodies.

"To ensure that a diet is truly balanced, carbohydrate intake should be 60 percent of total calories, fat intake 25 percent and protein intake 15 percent," Ennis said. small changes add up to big calorie and fat cutbacks. By choosing an apple over a candy bar, one can save over 200 calories and 15 grams of fat. Each day, enjoy five servings of fruits and vegetables, and you will be on your way to healthy eating.

But even with a demanding academic schedule, eating a healthy diet is not impossible.

Patti Ennis, a registered dietitian and SDSU alumna, offers the following suggestions to busy students desiring a healthy diet: "Most important, never skip breakfast," she said. "If you do, you will find yourself dragging by your afternoon classes."

In addition, Ennis suggested the following for quick on-the-run breakfasts: bagels with nonfat cream cheese, high-fiber and low-fat cereal with nonfat yogurt mixed in, low-fat granola bars, low-fat cottage cheese with pineapple chunks mixed in, or a slice of nonfat cheese and a piece of fruit.

If you are really pressed for time and need to eat in the car, grab a bag full of low-fat granola to eat. She recommended avoiding high-fat bakery muffins and croissants.

For the rest of your day, Ennis recommends foods high in complex carbohydrates To calculate your daily caloric needs, take your weight in pounds and multiply it by 10 if you are female, by 12 if you are a male. For weight loss, take your desired weight and multiply it by the same numbers.

Once you determine your needs, multiply them by the percentages above to find out how many calories from each group you need.

To determine how many grams of each group, divide fat calories by nine and protein and carbohydrate by four.

Using this method, a diet consisting of 1500 calories would be broken down into 225 grams of carbohydrate, 56 grams of protein, and 42 grams of fat.

Because of the new labeling law on food packages, it is easy to calculate your intake of all three groups.

Following healthy eating patterns may seem an insurmountable task at first, but University police prepared for pro-Ayatollah Khomeini demonstrations after police arrested 32 Iranians following a demonstration on campus in early August.

A hunger strike and sit-in outside Peiffer Lounge in Aztec Center led to the Aug. 4 arrests. Demonstrators refused to leave the area at 5 p.m. - a deadline enforced for all campus demonstrations.

Police began making arrests at 6 p.m. but were met with resistance, as demonstrators linked arms and began chanting and praying. Officers formed a ring around the demonstrators and began prying the demonstrators one by one from the human chain.

The university was the site of numerous Iranian student rallies after Iranian militants took over the American Embassy in Tehran in November.

Students that participated in advance registration were greeted with a pleasant surprise when student fees were reduced $39.

Originally, Gov. George Deukmejian's budget allowed a $42 decrease in the California State University fee. But after further review, the CSU Board of Trustees decided to increase the Student Services fee by $3.

Students were undercharged for their fall fees and were billed accordingly.

In 1981, the CSU system received a 2 percent reduction in its budget right before the beginning of the school year. An emergency surcharge, the State University fee, was demanded at the beginning of the Fall semester.

The new fee was included and increased until annual fees for the 1983-84 school year reached $692, a 300 percent increase from $226 in 1980-81.

The Daily Aztec reported the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was ordered to disband after the SAE board of directors voted in early August to suspend the San Diego State University chapter and ban its undergraduate group from campus.

The SDSU chapter of SAE was put under the control of an alumni board by its national office in the Fall of 1990 after an unsatisfactory one-year probationary period.

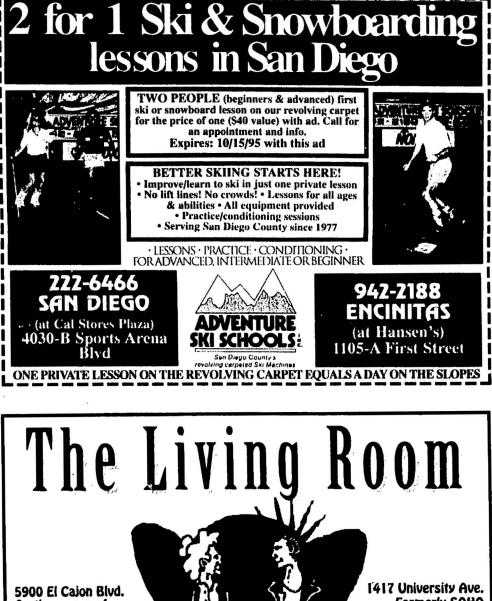

The fraternity was originally placed on probation because of financial, academic and behavioral problems. The chapter had been disciplined frequently since 1986.

Ambassador president prepares for new year

The Daily Aztec

By SAMANTHA PLOTKIN Daily Aztec Staff Writer

August 28, 1995

Regan Savalla, the newly elected Ambassador president, said she is looking forward to working for the organization. She said she hopes she will be able to bring some new ideas and insight to the organization and the university.

Savalla, a senior majoring in communications, said that to become the Ambassador president, she had to submit an application, go through an interview with the current president, the advisors and someone outside the Ambassador realm. Then she had to prepare a speech to every member of the organization.

Savalla also said her duties as Ambassador president include organizing all events for the Ambassadors, being an administrator of all the events and meetings and keeping university relations.

"This year the other officers and 1 are going to try and do a lot more outreach with the university," she said. "We are going to try and let everyone know who we are and what services we can provide for them. It will sometimes give a little bit more flair to the event because we are the official representatives of the university.

"It will definitely be a challenge," she said."I think one of the best things about being Ambassador president is the Ambassadors are a great organization. I'm looking forward to working with them."

Savalla said the original reason she became an Ambassador was because she thought it was a great service to the university and to the surrounding community.

"I really wanted to be a part of it," she said. During the summer, Savalla coordinated summer tours of the campus. She said the Ambassadors also work at all the Academic Information Days. During Academic Information Days incoming freshmen and transfer students visit San Diego State University and are counseled by the Ambassadors on the course catalog and are taught how to register for their classes. During the school year, the Ambassadors also work at every football game as hosts.

Savalla said the Ambassadors' established role are to be the official representatives and tour guides for SDSU.

In addition, Savalla said students interested in becoming Ambassadors can attend the first informational session at 2 p.m., Oct. 4 in Casa Real, located in Aztèc Center.

Applications will be available starting Oct. 9 at the Student Outreach Center's front desk. Applications will be due at 3 p.m., Oct. 30.

"They're looking for a variety of people all across campus," Savalla said. "They really want you to know who you are, why you want to be an Ambassador and what you would contribute to the organization." For more information, call 594-5221.

Leadership Institute helps make a difference

By SAMANTHA PLOTKIN Daily Aztee Staff Writer

The Leadership Institute being held from Oct. 27-29 will help make students into leaders who can make a difference, according to David Robertson, the Leadership Institute's coordinator.

The 11th Annual Leadership Institute will be at the San Diego Marriott in La Jolla. Robertson said the institute is an intensive weekend-long program offering a variety of sessions on many leadership topics and current issues.

"This year's theme is 'Avenues of Opportunity," Robertson said. "The theme is put together by an advisory group of students, faculty and staff who put it together every year."

Robertson said the institute will be offering over 50 different workshops on diverse topics such as leadership, and personal and professional growth.

"The workshops help students prepare for becoming a leader," he said. "They also aid in improving their skills as a leader."

In addition, Robertson said another way the institute helps students is to round out their education and to prepare them for the world outside the university.

Robertson said this year's keynote speaker is Tamara Severance, a motivational speaker on "grassroots" leadership. He said she leads workshops on how people can become empowered by changing things in their community.

"The most notable trait about leaders is that they are all ordinary people," Severance said. "They develop the ability to be unstoppable in the face of daunting circumstances. This makes them, truly, a force to be reckoned with." The institute's community service activity is Project Page Turner. Robertson said the program involves bringing about 200 elementary school students to the hotel. Then, college students participating in the Leadership Institute spend a couple of hours reading books that were collected throughout the year.

"After the children have been read to, they receive cookies and milk from the hotel," Robertson said. "Also, each child gets to take home about two to three books. We are there to excite them about reading.

"We are also there to show them there are other people who care, who think it's important to spend time reading and learning how to read."

Another community service program is the Volunteer Opportunity Fair. Robertson said it will include 10 different national organizations who are recruiting students. He hopes this program will encourage students to do community service.

"By doing community service, current leaders can have a perspective on the community and feel a part of their community," Robertson said. "I think if leaders are involved in their communities (by) volunteering they will feel a sense of ownership and empowerment that can really make a difference and motivate someone to want to be a leader."

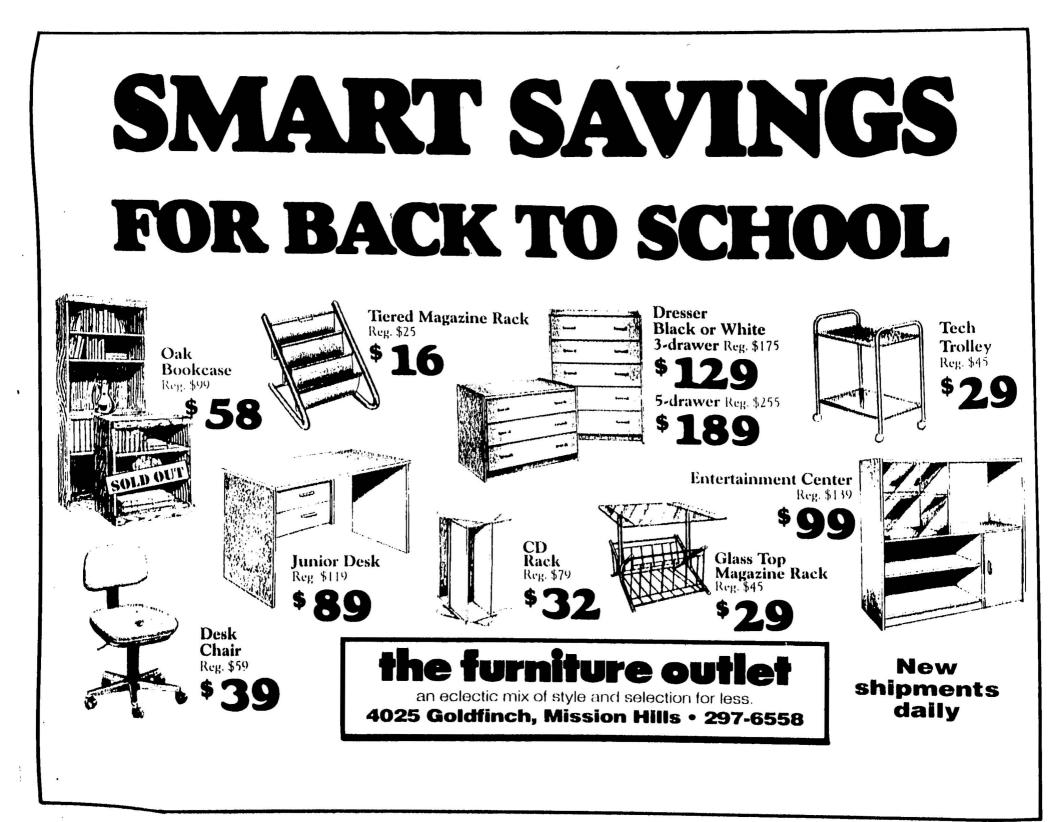

Regan Savalla, the institute's student intern, said full scholarships are sponsored by the Associated Students for the institute. For information about that, call 594-6487.

For more information about attending the institute, call Robertson at 594-5221.

During testimony, English-Howard said that on the night of the murder, he had stolen O'Donnell's ATM card while she slept and used it to withdraw $200 to purchase rock cocaine.

When he returned home, O'Donnell was waiting for him at the door. The ensuing argument caused the final confrontation, English-Howard said during testimony.

"She was going blah, blah, blah and I jumped on her," he said. "It happened really quick. One minute, I was at the door. And the next, I was just on her."

After he strangled O'Donnell, English-Howard put one plastic bag over her mouth, and two over her head, according to testimony. He then tied an electrical cord around her neck, thinking it would look like someone else had killed her.

Several days later, he turned himself in to police.

However, before then Lane said English-Howard telephoned her and told her he

"I think he killed her for her ATM card," Gallagher said. "But I didn't care about the 'why,' it was the 'what' and 'how' that mattered." Among those who testified on O'Donnell's behalf were Kathy Jones, chairwoman of the women's studies department, and several of O'Donnell's friends.

"I admire them very much," Lane said. "They were very brave to come forward."

She also said she will do everything in her power to see that English-Howard never regains his freedom.

"It's the anger and rage that keep me going," she said. "I don't want that clown out there harming any other woman's child."

According to Lane, English-Howard would kill again if he regained his freedom. "He uses girls to suck off of them finanampus police issued a misdemeanor citation on the suspicion of petty theft to a young woman seen taking items from Aztec Shops on Aug. 18.

According to the police report, an Aztec Shops loss prevention agent spotted Laura Niemira, 20, of the 6800 block of Friars Road, removing DayRunner organizer inserts from shelves, and installing them into her own personal organizer.

After placing the items into her organizer, Niemira attempted to leave through the west exit of Aztec Shops, according to the report. There, she was stopped and questioned by the loss prevention agent.

Niemira admitted to placing the items in her organizer, according to the report.

The agent then summoned campus police. It was later determined that Niemira removed a total of $11.65 in DayRunner inserts, according to the report.

parking and traffic changes, circulation, access and emergency routes, according to Piper.

"The committee is concerned with keeping the flow of traffic smooth," he said. "It looks five to seven years down the road. It sometimes takes about eight or nine years to propose a structure and get it done."

For students interested in reducing parking anxiety during the first weeks of school, Piper suggested some alternatives - one of which applies to students who own computers.

"Stay home and use your computer as much as possible," he said. "Library searches can be done and many professors are willing to accept student work via computer.'

Piper also offered an alternative for students who do not own a personal computer.

"Aside from the usual arriving to school early, be open to the idea of sharing a ride," he said. "We have a ride-match list. And upon request, we'll send you a list showing who's available to share a ride in your area."

Piper said ride-sharing is a good alternative because it costs less.

"Sharing can save gas," he said. "Those who ride together can also save money by sharing the cost of the permit."

Piper said things will be different in the future, but the changes won't be immediate. He said in the meantime, students should try to stay level headed.

"Things will settle within the next two to three weeks," Piper said. "Don't let parking drive you to do less than humane things."

Strong alumni support has been influential in keeping the fraternity secure, Smith said. He added that the move should not hinder the chapter from remaining a driving force in the college community. He hopes the situation will be resolved by this week.

"In the short term, Beta is sort of regrouping," Said Doug Case, coordinator of residential fraternity and sorority life and off-campus housing. "They will be operating out of a smaller location and working out their finances."

According to Case, the university does not get involved in matters such as this. And as in the case of Beta, they are working out its situation individually with the Foundation.

"We are currently working with Beta and we are confident that we will have an agreement soon," said Stephanie Barnett, director of community and public relations for the Foundation.

In addition to Beta's finding in a new area, Phi Kappa Psi will have a new look for fall. This fraternity will now reside in what returning students of SDSU may familiarize as the old Lambda Chi Alpha house.

While their old location was more apartment-like, the new residence gives more of an overall "house" appearance, which could benefit the fraternity in the long run.

Interfraternity Council President Court Turner said the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity had the most pledges by the end of last year.

"The new house can definitely help their chapter," he said. "They will be able to have parties and the larger house allows them to have more live-in members."

And more live-in members means more revenue for the fraternity.

Though not yet a member of the IFC, another fraternity that will benefit from residency is Phi Kappa Theta.

Formerly operating as a nonresident fraternity, Phi Kappa Theta moved on campus last spring. The house will be located at 5630 Hardy Ave, where the SDSU College of Extended Studies used to be. This location is also owned by the SDSU Foundation.

Two other fraternities that are vying for living arrangements and remain in the negotiation stage with the SDSU Foundation are Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Tau Kappa when it was learned that the alleged owner was actually a poser.

"It's part (San Diego Sheriff's) fault because they're supposed to research that as well," Powers said. "So they didn't do due diligence on their part."

The false information given by the socalled agent, M. Kushani, was not recognized as such, according to Don Crist, San Diego Sheriff's Department Media Relations representative.

"We sent the permit information to our investigative division and they ran up the owner's name on the property. And it checked OK," Crist said. "Then we called the fire marshal and they approved it verbally over the phone. Then we sent it to the Department of Planning and Land Use. They approved it based on all the information that the promoter had provided to us, which included a paper that listed an agent for the owner of the 800-acre property.

"It said that this person was an agent and in fact did have control of the land. Our licensing division ultimately got the paperwork back and they also ran up the parcel number and the owner's name. The agent was a prior proprietor on that property so his name showed up on the property as an involved party. However, we did not know that he was no longer part of that ranch or that acreage. And as a matter of fact, the lot information shows a partnership, so there were several other people involved." The partnership information on the property records gave the sheriff's department's licensing division no reason to question the contract between the agent and Global Underworld. "We had no reason to doubt the authenticity of the paper," Crist said. "We'd never had a problem like that before. And the promoter was the one providing the paperwork to us. So we went ahead and issued the permits on Wednesday." However, when Global Underworld started doing some set-up work on the property, an unidentified person - believed to be one Epsilon. After losing its charter in 1991, SAE was back last spring.

According to Case, the fraternity is looking to sublease one of two houses currently leased to Phi Delta Theta and owned by the Foundation. An SAE Alumni house was rented out to Alpha Delta Pi sorority when the fraternity lost its charter. The fraternity is hoping to reoccupy the facility next fall. Tau Kappa Epsilon is in a similar situation, as it owns a house being rented to the Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity. Tau Kappa Epsilon also hopes to move back into its old house next fall when SAM's lease is up.

Phi Kappa Theta, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Sigma Alpha Epsilon are all fairly new organizations and this is not really a move for them, but rather the need to acquire a place to reside, Case said.

mission to do any type of entertainment or event on my property," Crist said.

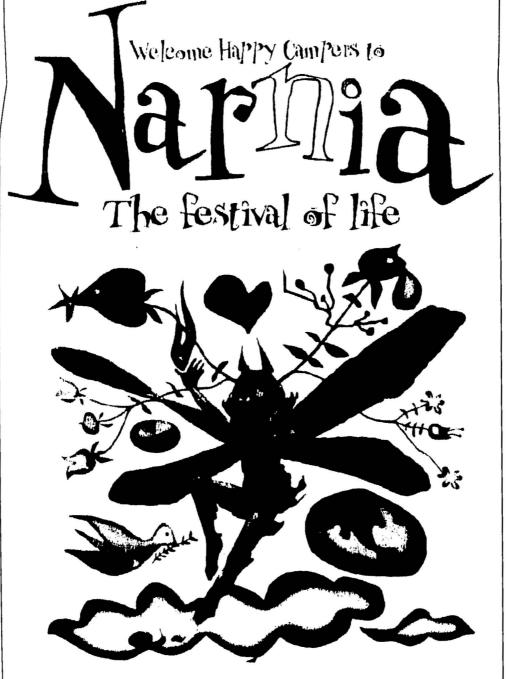

At that point, the sheriff's department checked and verified that he was indeed the sole owner of the property, contrary to the paperwork. Based on that, the sheriff's department was forced to revoke Global Underworld's permits.

"The permits were issued based on false information that was provided by the promoter," Crist said. "Although I don't think the promoter knew that. I think he honestly was given the run-around by the person that got his money and acted as the agent."

Crist said Global Underworld was trying to secure a location next door to the original property. But unfortunately, the permits could not be issued in one day because it takes a couple of days for the licensing process to go through the system.

"If they come in on Monday, we really do have every intent of issuing new permits," Crist said. "There is no prejudice on our part and I know the media's trying to make it out to be an adversarial situation. But certainly, we wouldn't have issued the permits if we were the ones that were blocking it.

"The best way I can explain it is that we wanted them to have it, we weren't concerned about it and we thought it was a go." As for getting their $3,000 deposit back from the phony agent, Crist said it was strictly up to Global Underworld to bring it up to the sheriff's department as a civil problem. It's strictly up to them, but we're looking into it too," Crist said. "Something happened in our system and we're going to certainly try to fix it to where we make sure that we double check the records." The Global Underworld Network has been organizing the music and dance event known as Narnia for four years now. Earlier, Powers said this year's festival would be the last for the San Diego area, as the organization has hopes of taking Narnia on the road for 1996.

Nobody gets off in my opinion

Editor's Column/Jennifer Stone

Strange how the laws of physics infect the realm of journalism. For every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. Just as for every newsworthy event, there is an untold story buried deep beneath the general protocol of objectivity.

While objectivity rightfully serves its purpose in describing situations or events, it leaves much to public scrutiny because it is inoffensive, minimal and just plain safe. For example, a reporter at The Daily Aztec can cover a story on the decline of the San Diego State University Greek system and cite the factors causing its downfall, but our reporter cannot tell us in his or her own words, that the entire Greek system is a dwindling band of date-raping homophobes. That auspicious burden falls on the columnists of the opinion section.

trip to the Lottery's Big Spin, but only an opinion columnist will tell you that by purchasing a lottery ticket Joe is supporting the "gameshowization" of California's educational funding. (My little brother says thanks for the geometry book, Don Pardo.)

While events, incidents and experiences are readily available in daily papers, nowhere else will you ultimately find issues raked over individual coals. Opinion columnists have the unique ability to weigh newsworthy events against personal convictions. Because a writer's principles may differ from our own, it is enlightening and often enraging to read an opposite perspective. Seldom does one get to hear such insightful arguments for laxer noise pollution laws than from contributing yodelers. Such is the beauty of opinion.

This semester, The Daily Aztec opinion section promises to debate the issues that influence all of our lives. The outlooks presented are those of fellow students, faculty and staff who have the courage to bring necessary issues to the forefront of the campus community. In this open forum for campus ideas, we'll see a reflection of who we are as an entire unit – for better or for worse – under the close eye of the opinion section.

The Daily Aztec Editorial Policy

Editor's note: This is a condensed version of The Daily Aztec eight-page editorial policy. Any reader wishing to see the entire document is welcome to do so at The Daily Aztec office in the PSFA building, Room 361.

It is the goal of The Daily Aztec to publish information of interest and importance to the San Diego State University community. At all times the paper will endeavor to be fair, accurate and responsible in providing complete and reliable news coverage.

The Daily Aztec sees its role as providing information that individuals in the university community either do not have access to or do not have the time to acquire. The Daily Aztec then strives to present this material in a clear and understandable manner.

Courts have looked upon college campuses as unique places in society where ideas are born, nurtured and brought to maturity. Courts have also established that the student press is entitled to essentially the same rights as the professional press through the First Amendment. The Daily Aztec is committed to the idea that public issues must be debated equally, even if the issues may be considered controversial to the university administration, government, or strongly opposed by the student body.

However, it is realized that each right has a corresponding duty. Therefore, the primary aim of The Daily Aztec will be to give adequate reports of the day's news and bring to light events worthy of publication in an unbiased and accurate manner.

The Daily Aztec realizes that the First Amendment is not absolute when it comes to libel or obscenity. The constitutional guarantee does not permit publication of statements which are libelous or based on innuedo.

If The Daily Aztec makes mistakes, it is the editor's duty to print prompt and complete corrections of errors in fact or opinion.

The Daily Aztec does not take lightly its responsibility to the university community. Employees at The Daily Aztec have a professional approach to their work. They strive to impart this professionalism to the people whom they deal with every day. The Daily Aztec realizes that, like with any organization, the mere statement of policy does not ensure its fulfillment. The human qualities of dedication, honesty, fairness and good judgement are irreplaceable and key in the fulfillment of The Daily Aztec's responsibility.

With such pesky objectivity infecting the newsrooms of daily papers, it is up to the opinion section to analyze events, question characters, and rationalize situations otherwise left to unpretentiously exist. You may read that Joe Mug from Lakeside just won a

It's time to 'dig in' to school

VIEWPOINT/Suzanne Richards

For my first column of the year, 1 want to salute the institution from where we receive our stimulation, the source of our friends and culture, our means for gossip, conversation and experience. It is our livelihood, a haven for the obtuse, a shelter for the naive. (You thought I was going to say "storm," didn't you?)

Oh, and sometimes we learn some really cool stuff.

The university has been referred to as a restaurant for the mind. People like Thomas Day would like to think of college as a house of fine dining, with plenty of fancy chairs in which to sit, a plethora of scrumptious delicacies to sample and a bathroom attendant to hand you that towel that doubles as a diploma. That towel says, "Hey, I'm special. I went to college, graduated and now I'm going to get that really cool job and have no problems."

But I've been to two universities now and I think that college is more like a busy hospital cafeteria with harrowed customers who push, shove and don't have the time nor the money to eat what they want because all the good stuff gets hogged by the people who got there first. When you finally do get to eat, the meal's either boring, unpalatable, or you just can't comprehend it enough to enjoy it. Or maybe, you got pushed out of line and you went hungry. The frustrated mass gets mixed up in your stomach of a brain and makes you ill. You can't really call it relief during the purging of finals time. Funny how it looks just as familiar coming out as it did going in. But it's been a long summer of Scooby Doo reruns and you're a little hungry. You get wrenches and gnaws as you ponder laws, motions and functions. You open the fridge and think of Newton, Blake and Bacon, lettuce and tomato. You are chomping at the bit, so here are some Scooby snacks for the brain.

"If it is questionable whether the little creatures could chuck wood, why then are they called woodchucks?

• The meaning of "What's the frequency, Kenneth?" This REM song took its name from an incident in which Dan Rather was approached by a man who inquired of him this very phrase, to which he replied, "I don't want to tell you." Subsequently, the man beat up Dan. Do you think Dan really said that? Do you think that's worth getting beat up? I think it's more likely that Dan was walking down the street listening to his dynamite transistor radio and that man wanted to borrow it. Dan actually beat him up for getting his name wrong or something, a famous guy like him.

• The theory that there is a partner for everyone. If by generous estimate one concludes that there are approximately 400 compatible partners for you and that these folks are geographically distributed over all countries and deeming people in Third World countries unlikely because of hunger, warfare and lack of Pan America service, that leaves you with about 7.6 people. After living in the United States and dating 7.6 people to no avail, should you move? Discuss.

• They named it Greenland to attract settlers but why when the new people arrived, didn't they change the name? Do you think they were pissed off? I think they were hiding in the bushes when the new people sailed up, snickering. Discuss.

• How much wood could a woodchuck chuck if a wood chuck could chuck wood? This gets me. If it is questionable whether the little creatures could chuck wood, why then are they called woodchucks? How can you ask that? Do you think this lack of trust contributes to the insecurity and general apathy of our youth today?

• If love is blind and Stevie Wonder is blind, is Stevie Wonder love? Hey, you can't argue with logic. What if you don't like piano? Discuss.

• Ray, Ella, Friedrich and Jane are all going to the movies and they have one car. Ray can never sit next to Ella, Friedrich always rides next to Ray and Jane never sits with the driver.

a) Why can't Ella sit next to Ray? Does he have fast hands? You know it's a real shame that in the 1990s, one has to practically sit in the trunk to say that no means no. I suspect a mysogonistic plot in Ray and Friedrich, so I suggest the girls hang out by themselves and leave the guys to flex their biceps. Besides, it probably wasn't a very good movie.

So school is in and it's time to tie on that bib. Have a good year and remember, when it comes to school, don't bite off more than you can chew – take everything with a grain of salt. And last of all, always remember to follow the recipe because if you don't, you could wind up in bad taste.

A call for solidarity within African-American community

VIEWPOINT/Brandon Green

The time is always right to do what is right.

–Martin Luther King

S chool is again in session and "playtime" has concluded – for another 10 months, anyway. Summer has come and is rapidly going, so I hope that school is at least an afterthought in your rested minds.

Yes, it's time for $100 book totals, five day class schedules and many empty wallets. It's also time for you to bring your mind to the academic storehouse of San Diego State University and load up – you'll starve in the real world if you don't take advantage of the wealth of information that surrounds you. Therefore, it's time for all of us, especially the African-American community, to do what is right: To get an education, and eventually, that almighty degree.

So few of us who start the educational journey obtain that crinkled piece of paper that is our ticket to the real world. Therefore, I'm sending you, Black SDSU, this message in your time of need. As another school year dawns, I feel that Black SDSU is more divided than ever. As a Black man beginning my third year here, I am filled with a bittersweet sensation that haunts me as we come to the storehouse. On one hand, I feel like we're about to embark on new experiences as a race and a school, and learn more about life than we ever did at home under Mom and Dad's roof. However, on the other hand, I know that while I stand ready to enter the storehouse, the African-American community is fast becoming an endangered species, and that more and more of us are missing the opportunity to explore the storehouse as a people.

For whatever reasons, whether it be grades, money, etc., the dilemma that confronts us, a community, is that we are not completing the educational journey. Brothers and sisters who began the venture with me in 1993 have dwindled in number, and the ones that remain aren't planning to stay long enough to be Aztec graduates. Personally, I know of at least 30 brothers and sisters from my freshmen year that have left the storehouse, and I know of at least 10 from 1994 that have departed from the academic oasis.

These numbers are excessive and expensive for us as a race. For every African-American that leaves the storehouse, we as a people lose another mind, soul and spirit. The process continues until the vaunted day of graduation. So many of us have fallen off the graduation track that seeing a brother or sister walking the stage in a cap and a gown is a rarity.

The problem of a Black exodus from SDSU is confounded by a lack of closeness within the Black community on campus. I hate to say it, but our Black populace is not a tight unit of solidarity, but a scattered arrangement of organizations groping in the dark ... and not necessarily for each other. I feel like our African-American freshmen are not entering a close community of Blackness, but instead a dysfunctional collection of fragmented groups and peoples. I see rifts between freshmen and upperclassmen, and I see little or no togetherness between old pros and young bucks. It's almost as if we are only out for ourselves, and against one As we stand at the edge of another school year, we as a community must ensure that college is a tremendous experience for all of us. I hope the African-American community welcomes their freshmen into the storehouse with open arms, so that we all may realize all of its fruits. Let us all support Afrikan Student Union and Ujima. By doing so, we'll get to know each other, and I can't know my family if I haven't met them yet.

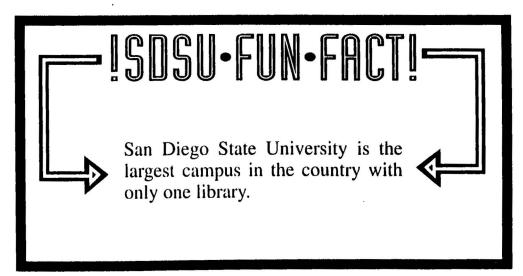

"I hate to say it, but our Black populace is not a tight unit of solidarity, but a scattered arrangement of organizations groping in the dark ..."

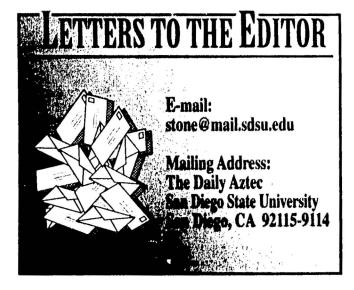

So, good luck to everyone at SDSU on another school year; may your grades be As and for our community, the same. But remember that if one of us fails, we fail as a group. So I hope that we all have success by realizing our Blackness and our bachelor degrees of destiny. If you ask me, it's about time.

It's official: Warner's coach

Despite the wait, Aztecs are glad to settle the coaching situation before the start of the season

By FERRIS SHAHRESTANI

Daily Aztec Sports Editor

aughter and relief have replaced months of whisperings in the San Diego State women's volleyball office.

The office is filled with players. They greet you with a smile. More laughter.

Mark Warner finally has the weight of the interim label lifted off his shoulders.

Warner carried the label in front of his title as head coach ever since he took over for Myles Gable, the women's volleyball coach who was suspended in April. Gable was found to be in violation of the university's policy on sexual harassment.

Now Warner carries the weight of high expectations from an Aztec squad ranked 24th in the preseason USA Today poll.

Warner is pleased to have earned a chance at tackling the challenge.

"(Being named coach) was a relief," Warner said. "But now, we're going to get after it. We expect to have a successful season. We expect to win the Western Athletic Conference and do well beyond that."

Warner has earned a reputation as a player's coach and his players seemed as relieved as he that Warner was officially named the team's coach.

"The whole team had been hoping (Warner) would be named coach," defensive specialist Meesha McLaughlin said. "He gets along really well with everyone." That feeling was evidenced by the fact that players were hanging out in his office an hour before a Saturday morning practice.

Would this have happened when Gable was coach? "No," the players blurt out in unison.

While most people involved expected Warner to be officially named coach, he made no assumptions during the interim.

"We've learned not to assume anything," Warner said. "We tried not to think about it and tried to just go on."

The process of naming Warner head coach was clouded by the procedures which had to be taken not only by the athletic department, but by the personnel department as well.

"The administration tried to do things sooner," Warner said, "but there were procedures that had to be taken by the personnel department."

So 10 days before the Aztecs were to participate in their first tournament of the season, Athletic Director Rick Bay named Warner coach for the upcoming season.

"We felt that hiring (Warner) for this season was the proper move at this point," Bay said in a statement. "He is familiar with the program and to have conducted a longterm search this past summer would have been difficult since many coaches interested in the job were already committed to other teams."

Now the Aztecs are committed to Warner.

"I think the reason he is so well liked," McLaughlin said, "is because his overall goal is to make each player better. He helps me, a defensive specialist that plays in the back row, as much as he helps the setters and spikers.

"He has high expectations for everyone, but he doesn't just leave you on your own to achieve them. He'll work with you and help you to achieve your goals."

Speed, speed and more speed

Last year's weaknesses on the women's soccer team have been addressed

By RYAN BYRNE Daily Aztec Staff Writer

fter last season, San Diego State women's soccer head coach Chuck Clegg felt the need – the need for speed. So he went out and got it in the form of six top recruits, including a state champion in track.

"Last season our biggest weakness was our team speed," said Clegg, "and other teams were exposing that weakness. In any sport, speed is probably the most important physical attribute a player can have."

Clegg's 1995 recruiting class looks like this:

• Stefanie Mathews. The 5-foot-7 forward/midfielder is from Tucson, Ariz., where she earned All-State honors as a senior at Salpointe High School. Mathews, a three-year All-League choice, was named MVP of the Southern Arizona League in '95 and was also an All-State selection last year. She also lettered in track three years, winning the state championship in the 400m as a junior.

• Catherine McGuire. A center halfback, she was an All-League selection each of her four years at Cherry Creek High School in Englewood, Colo. McGuire was an All-State selection as a senior and a two-time MVP for the Bruins. She also played on the U.S. Regional team.

• Fullback/midfielder Gina Tocco. Tocco, from Huntington Beach, was a member of nother one bites the dust. Just like that the summer has passed, with the same routine events as each of the previous. So what does the sporting world have to show

There was the good, with peats, repeats, and Pete three-peated. Then there was the bad, but they don't rhyme.

First the good. The United States established itself as a force to be reckoned with in the soccer world, sort of. Beating Mexico twice helped their cause, which is really a cry for attention.

In the American Sport Fan Family, soccer is the neglected, inbred cousin of the clan. Underfed and dressed in hand-medowns, soccer seeks attention with outbursts such as this summer's. proved they are dynasty-worthy by winning on the road throughout the playoffs.

Pete Sampras became the first American to win three straight Wimbeldons. Pretty good for a guy that never graduated from high school.

It is reported that he didn't feel any pressure of becoming the first American to accomplish such a feat, because after the first one, he lost count.

But there was also some sorrow this summer, which always seems to overshadow anything positive.

Trying to bunny-hop a cement slab on a sharp turn of the Tour de France proved to be fatal for one racer, which left a black flag over the rest of the race.

Alabama was nailed by the NCAA gang for overly creative financial distributions. The program is rich in tradition and was ranked 10th in the nation, but this year will be for not as they are not allowed to play in a bowl game.

Daily Aztec/DAN MCDOWELL Freshman Catherine McGuire (far right) is a four-time All-League performer out of Cherry Creek HighSchool in Colorado. McGuire will play center and halfback for the Aztecs. But even an under-publicized NBA Championship takes the spotlight.

For those of you who didn't know, didn't notice or can't remember, the Houston Rockets won a second straight crown. Maybe people were too preoccupied recognizing the one-year anniversary of O.J.'s ordeal, but for some reason, the American public was not too captivated by the series, so said the television ratings.

We have not yet adopted the Rockets, or grown too close to any of the players. (That Taco Bell commercial with Hakeem Olajuwan and Shaq acting like little boys doesn't help too much.)

You get the feeling that the Rockets are not exactly heartbroken about their lack of acceptance. They shouldn't be. They were underdogs going into the playoffs, and I don't know how they were caught, but I think they went wrong when they left their former All-American kick returner, Forrest Gump, in charge of the cover-up.

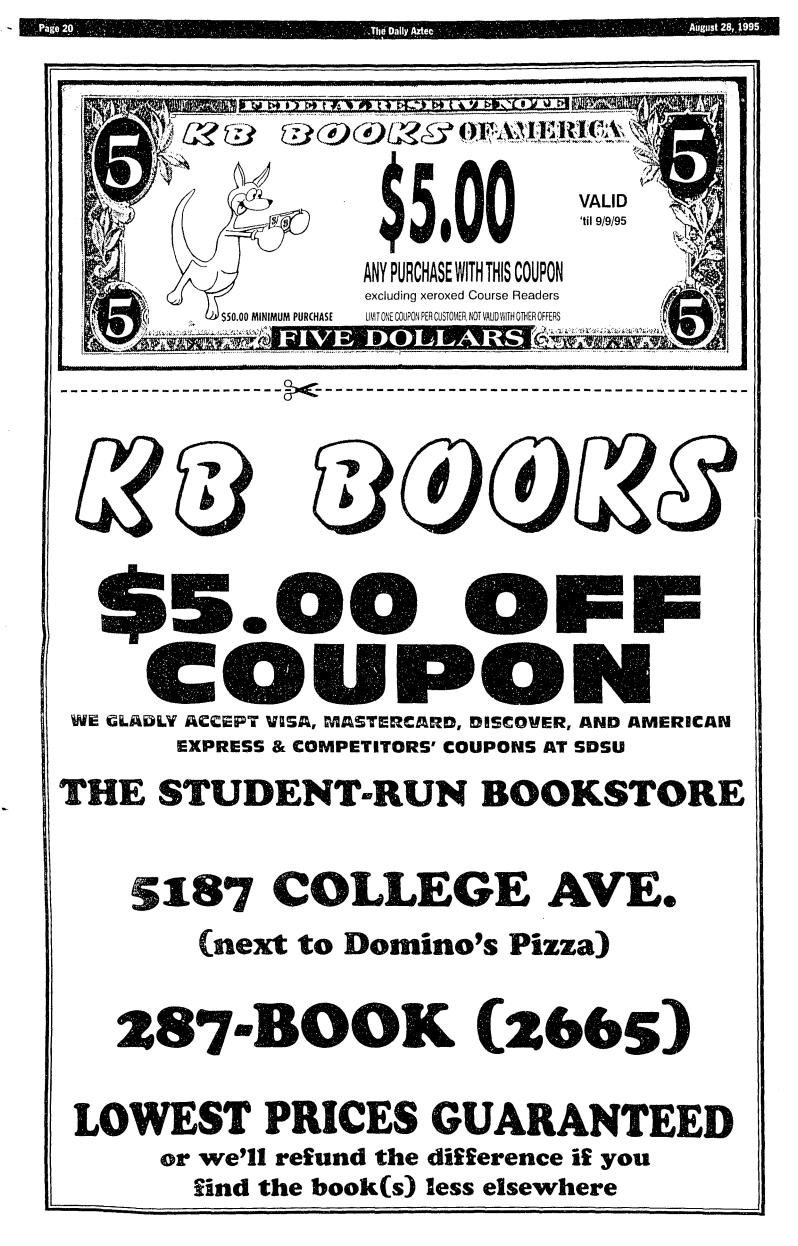

Speaking of men in football with a few screws loose, Al Davi$ took his traveling circus back to Oakland. Now the unruly, gang-infested crowds that were known for attending the Raider games in Los Angeles will be replaced by classy, much more civilized Oakland natives. Or something.

Whether or not you are a Raider fan, their move back should prove to be very interesting. Will they be inspired by the never-before felt fan appreciation, or will they collapse under the pressure placed on them by a city of their most hard-core fans?

Stay tuned.

The NFL will have a number of interesting developments over the course of the

Vance Redfern named new senior associate director of athletics

Sports Briefs

By ANDREW SAMUELSON and FERRIS SHAHRESTANI

Daily Aztec Asst. Sports Editor and Sports Editor

Hilling his promise to hire a "righthand man," Athletic Director Rick Bay named Vance Redfern as San Diego State's new senior associate director of athletics.

Redfern brings 32 years of experience in athletic administration and coaching to the position. However, he has spent the past seven years out of collegiate athletics, serving as the executive director of the Illinois Professional Golfers Association.

Bay became acquainted with Redfern while the two worked at different schools in the Big Ten Conference. Ironically, Redfern served as the senior associate athletic director at Illinois for Neale Stoner, who is currently the golf coach at SDSU.

Bay served as the athletic director at Ohio State University at the same time, coming in contact with Redfern.

"The biggest attribute (Redfern) brings to the job is that he's done it before," Bay said. "I got to know him when I was at Ohio State and he was at Illinois. During that time, Illinois made its greatest strides in history in athletics."

Redfern's primary duties include the dayto-day operations of the athletic department, enabling Bay to concentrate on external affairs.

Redfern started his career in intercollegiate athletics in California. After receiving his degree in physical education and mathematics from Western New Mexico University in 1963, he spent 11 years teaching and coaching at the junior high and high school level in California.

He spent six years as an assistant athletic director at Cal State Fullerton before moving to Illinois from 1980-88.

"I'm very pleased to be returning to intercollegiate athletics," said Redfern in a statement. "The potential that exists in the Aztec program and the opportunity to work for a nationally-respected administrator in Rick Bay were two of the major factors that encouraged me to pursue this position.

"I look forward to helping SDSU continue to build a solid, respected and successful intercollegiate athletics program."

The deuce is aced

ESPN2 contacted Athletic Director Rick Bay over the summer with a proposal to televise the Nov. 25 game vs. Colorado State.

ESPN2, which now reaches 44 million homes, wanted the starting time of the game changed from 5:05 to 7:05 p.m.

Bay declined the offer, wanting to keep the game time the same for the Aztecs' last game of the 1995 season.

"I thought it would be unfair to our fans,"

"But our excitement with him really wasn't for this year. We're looking at him for what he can do over the course of his career here."

Richard will still be attending classes at SDSU starting today, but will not be allowed to practice with the team.

Though Trenkle was disappointed, he is still confident his returning players coupled with his recruits will strengthen the program.

"We still have Chad Nelson, who has two years of experience at the position," Trenkle said. "You add that to some of the talent we signed like 'Circus' King and I think we'll be fine."

Baseball stadium

The first construction phase of the baseball stadium replacing Smith Field begins Oct. 1, with the construction of new lights, according to head coach Jim Dietz.

The university will be paying for the cost of installing lights around Smith Field for the upcoming 1996 season, Dietz said.

Actual demolition and construction of the stadium begins after the '96 season, allowing the new stadium to open in '97, with a minimum of a 4,000-seat capacity.

There were hopes the stadium would be ready for the '96 season, but the construction began too late.

Dietz said the additional year gives the program time to look for more fund-raising for the facility.

Aztecs in the minors

In addition to the signings of Adam Virchis (White Sox), Dan Murray (Mets), Jeff DaVanon (A's), Brian Kooiman (Independent) and Tony Zaragoza (Independent) to the minor leagues, two other players from last year's team were drafted.

Junior Jerrod Riggan, who played shortstop and pitcher last season, was taken in the 13th round by the Florida Marlins, but has not yet signed.

Junior pitcherJustin Rayment was selected in the 43rd round by the White Sox. It is unlikely Rayment will sign because after the 40th round, players are drafted on a follow-and-evaluate format, according to Bob Cluck, director of minor league pitching for the Oakland A's. The White Sox have Rayment's rights for a year, allowing them to sign him if he develops before next June.

SDSU lost its top recruit, shortstop Cole Liniak, to the draft. Liniak was taken in the sixth round by the Boston Red Sox, after verbally committing to the Aztecs last January.

Sources say Liniak's contract deal was less than Murray's, who was taken four rounds later.

New recruits

With the loss of the five players to the pros, plus the loss of Liniak, the Aztecs have recruited heavily at pitcher and infield positions.

Of the nine announced recruits, the Aztecs have signed four pitchers, three infielders, a center fielder and a catcher. The prize of the recruiting class so far is shortstop Brandon Lenox out of Arizona. Lenox committed after Liniak signed with the Red Sox.

Vance Redfern was named senior associate director of athletics by Athletic Director Rick Bay. Redfern held the same position at Illinois under current Aztec golf coach Neale Stoner.

Cal's Jacque Jones dominated the team's statistics.

Lee will be returning for what will likely be his final year at SDSU next season. The 6-foot-3, 200-pound Lee from Olympia, Wash., is a projected first-round pick for the June, '96 major league draft, who could go as high as No. 1, according to Dietz.

Bay said. "If the money had been a little more substantial, perhaps, we would have looked at it a little differently.

"You can always second guess yourself when you get down to that game and both teams are 9-1. To have to make that decision that far in advance to move the starting time two hours, I thought would be unfair to our season ticket holders."

Lost recruit

The Aztec basketball team and head coach Fred Trenkle were dealt a blow when they found out that top recruit Shomario Richard will most likely be declared ineligible to play this season.

Richard needed scores of 700 on the SAT or 16 1/2 on the ACT to meet eligibility requirements. Richard scored 690 on the SAT and 16 on the ACT.

"He came as close to passing those tests as you can without actually passing them," Trenkle said. "We signed him two weeks before he took the test so there was very little we could do. Club sports season ready to begin henever a team fails to compete for an entire year, the subsequent season is usually very bleak.

This was not the case, though, for women's crew last year. After missing the entire 1993-94 season, San Diego State University's rowers bounced back in '95 to win several major regattas.

This year, with at least one strong group of eight returning, the team hopes to improve upon its '95 record and be a force in '96.

In order to field the strongest team possible from the largest pool available, coach Scott Steckler encourages any interested women to come out, regardless of skill level or previous experience.

Practices start with recruiting meetings Sept. 5 and 6 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Backdoor Theater of Aztec Center.

Cycling

Greg LeMond, Miguel Indurain, Lance Armstrong and Aaron Quesnell - all premier cyclists, but only one will be riding for SDSU's cycling team this year.

Quesnell, regarded by teammates as one of the most naturally gifted cyclists ever to ride for SDSU, is expected to lead an inexperienced but very talented team into the upcoming season.

Although Quesnell was the only Aztec to race in the most competitive collegiate division (category "A") last year, three returning riders will make the jump up from "Bs" to form a solid squad this year.

"With Mike (Walkenhorst), Dan (Bridgeman) and John (Tyner) riding "As" this year, we should definitely make regionals," Quesnell said, "and probably even do something nationally."

While this foursome is obviously highly skilled, the club encourages male and female participation at all levels. Practices are held on Saturday mornings and will start around mid-September.

Rugby

Winning a national championship is the pinnacle of all collegiate athletics. In 1987, SDSU rugby entered the land of the elite by capturing the national title.

For the past eight seasons, every Aztec rugby team has focused on the long-term goal of repeating that performance.

This upcoming season, coach Fabio Comana feels that the Aztecs have "a real good chance" to do just that. The team is returning all but two of last year's starters, including this year's captain, alternate All-American Scott Yungling.

To help achieve the long-range goal, Comana hopes to accomplish short-term goals of winning key tournaments throughout the fall, and eventually winning the league.

Although the first team is very talented, there is room in SDSU rugby for all interested participants.

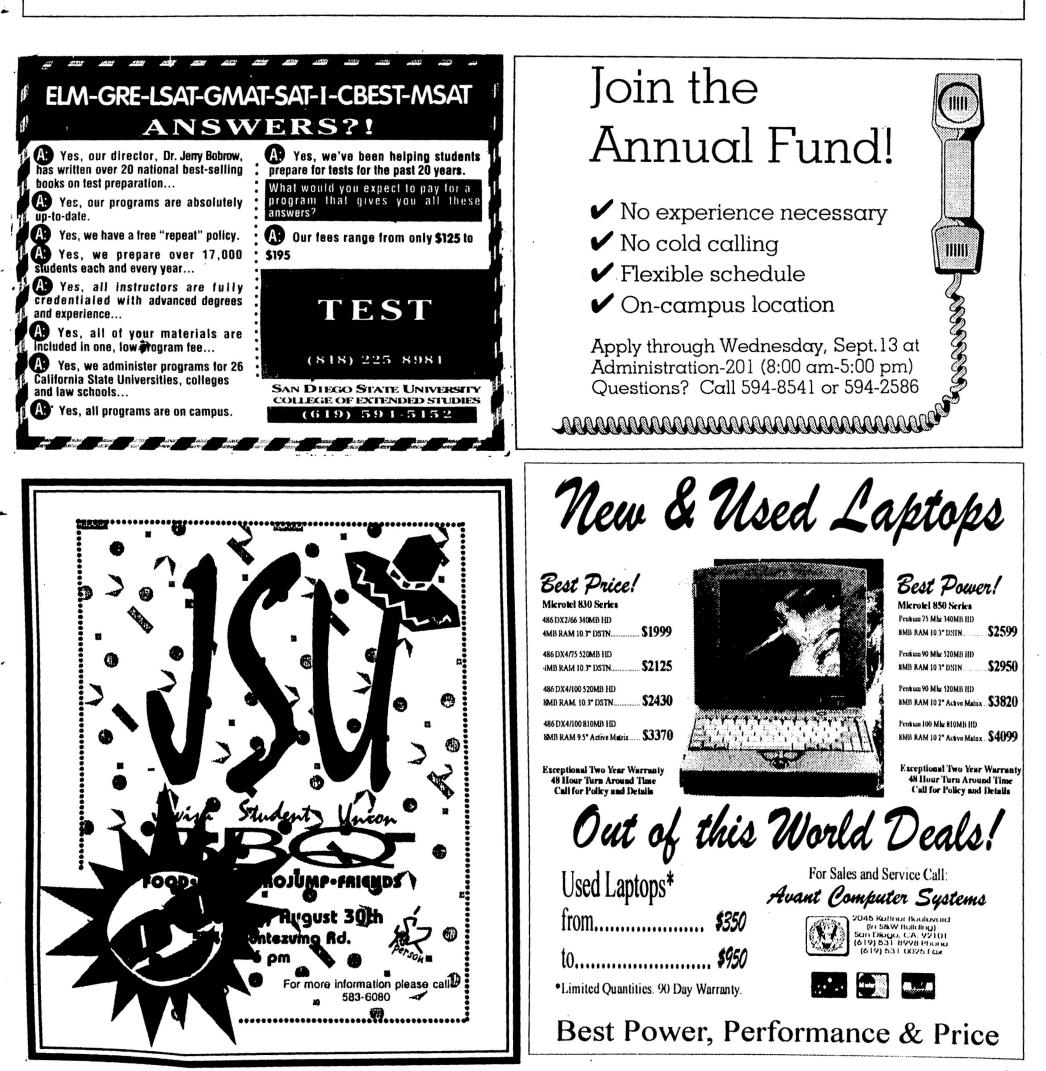

Like most club sports, no one gets cut. There will be an organizational meeting during the first week of September for new players and practice starts Sept. 12.

Women's Soccer

The women's soccer club looks to be as competitive as ever this season. The team is returning almost everyone from last year and is already focusing on a major tournament in Las Vegas Nov. 3 and 4.

Because the season starts in mid-September, tryouts will be held the first week of school during practice sessions

Tryouts are open to everyone and will be Aug. 29 and 31 from 4 to 6 p.m. on the lower football field. The first game is scheduled for Sept. 17.

Women's Volleyball Preview San Diego State returns all 11 players from last year's team

By PATRICK GREEN Daily Aztee Staff Writer

ptimism hovers around the San Diego State women's volleyball team as it heads into the 1995 season. And why should it be any different?

They return all 11 players from a team that finished last season with a 22-10 record and advanced to the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

Among the returnees are three players who were named first-team All-Western Athletic Conference.

The team has put the sexual harassment incident involving former head coach Myles Gable behind them. And they finally found a new head coach in Mark Warner.

"I really feel positive about this year," junior outside hitter Ginger Ernest said. "There's a real sense of camaraderie and everyone is confident in each other's abilities.

"I know that I won't have to reach back for balls because I know that one of my teammates will be there to back me up."

Ernest believes this team has the potential to be one of the top volleyball powers in the nation.

"I am really excited about this year," she said. "I want to at least make it to the Sweet 16 (in the NCAA Tournament), and I think that's a reasonable goal considering all the people we have coming back from last year."

The Aztecs return the core of the team in first-team All-WAC performers, Jennifer Hamilton, Juliana Cezar and Ernest.

Hamilton, a senior middle blocker, is a consistent player who Warner will look to for leadership.

"I think the seniors are the stabilizing factors in a team," Warner said. "They should set a good example for the younger players on the team."

Hamilton is a dependable player who was the only Aztec to start in all 120 games last season.

She is a versatile attacker who led the WAC with a .375 hitting percentage, a total that ranked 17th in the nation.

Daily Aztec/GHASSAN BOGHOS

"There's a real sense of camaraderie and everyone is confident in each other's abilities," All-American candidate Ginger Ernest said of this year's women's volleyhall team.

She also posted 284 kills and 136 digs last season, and led the team in total blocks with 163.

Cezar, a junior outside hitter from Sao Paolo, Brazil is a talented player who possesses excellent ball handling and backcourt skills.

The 1993 WAC freshman-of-the-year led the team with 357 digs and 49 service aces.

She also racked up 427 kills, good for second best on the team.

Ernest, a junior from North Las Vegas, is an All-American candidate, who has the kind of talent that can dominate games single-handedly.

She posted 574 kills last season, the sixth highest season total in school history and led the WAC in kills per game with 4.99.

She also totaled 321 digs last season, which ranked second on the team, and recorded 34 service aces.

Her playing ability has established her as a floor leader.

"Ginger is the vocal leader on the team," Hamilton said. "She's really aware of everything that happens on the court."

Another talented player who was overshadowed by the "big three" last season is Martina Vitkova.

The sophomore outside hitter from Prague, Czechoslovakia had an excellent freshman year and played in 119 out of 120 games.

She finished third on the team with 363 kills and 261 digs. She also registered 116 blocks and 36 service aces.

Warner will be counting on these starting outside hitters to put the pressure on the opposing team.

"Ginger, Juliana and Martina are our goto-players," he said. "They get the most swings and they have to be effective if we are going to be successful."

Although Warner will be depending a lot on these players, he was quick to acknowledge that their backups are almost as important.

"I think Michaela (Paz) and Romana (Vitkova) will be an integral part of this team," he said. "They have to be ready to play at any given moment."

Paz had a tough freshman year as she battled a nagging shoulder injury all last season, which caused her to see limited time on the court.

Romana is the younger sister of Martina Vitkova. She played in 22 matches last season, but will be looked to have a stronger role this year.

Rejoining the team will be senior outside hitter Suzanne Turcotte, who redshirted after undergoing reconstructive knee surgery.

Turcotte will add experience and depth to the outside hitting position.

Warner will count on the talented duo at the setter position in Andrea Clark and Michelle Pistone to run the offense.

Clark, had an impressive freshman season after emerging as the starter early in the year.

She racked up 1,310 assists (13.37 apg), which ranked first in the WAC and ninth in the nation.

She set an SDSU record for most assists in a three-game match when she totaled 59 against Fresno State on Nov.11.

Pistone, a junior from San Diego, had a very good spring season and will give Warner a reliable backup to Clark.

Warner will have Carrie Mapes, Sarah White and Mariesa Berquist in addition to Hamilton at the middle blocking position.

Mapes is a sophomore who will provide depth and strong blocking skills in the middle.

White and Berquist redshirted last season and will help solidify the middle blocking position even more.

The team's defense got a lot better last season, thanks to defensive specialist Meesha McLaughlin.

The junior saw action in 31 matches last year and finished the season with six kills, 10 service aces and 101 digs.

Warner knows the Aztecs have the talent to be a very good team. The question still remains how the team will perform in game situations.

"We know we're good," he said. "But we have to take a different approach and realize that we have to take every opponent seriously because we can be beat.

"We know that we're the team to beat in the WAC, and we should thrive on it. But we've got to have the internal motivation to show everyone just how good we are."

If there is one concern that Warner has for this squad it is their ability to close out games.

"We are a very young team," he said, "and we have a tender by to back off toward the end of the matches.

"I am confider we will improve on this because it will come with maturity, but I can't really tell until we actually play in a match."

Offense loosens up in second scrimmage

Blanton, Jones have impressive days as the defensive unit wilts

By BEN SAXE

Daily Aztec Staff Writer

On Friday afternoon, in the hot August heat, Claude Gilbert looked a little frazzled.

He had good reason. The San Diego State defensive coordinator had just seen the Aztecs' final preseason scrimmage, which had the offense making up for the first one.

On Aug. 19 the defense totally dominated play, being exceptionally successful in stopping the run. But a lot changed in a week. Just ask Gilbert.

"This year, we have the ability to make giant strides ahead defensively," Gilbert said. "I'm just not real excited about it right now."

Head coach Ted Tollner was impressed with the offense.

"Today was the complete opposite of Saturday," Toll-

"The thing is that it's hard to be consistently impressed when you are playing yourself because if one side does really well, then the other side got its tail kicked." Quarterback Billy Blanton was 10-13 for 129 yards and three touchdowns. Backup Kevin McKechnie was 10-16 for 87 yards. Will Blackwell, Ray Peterson and Daryl Hawkins each caught a touchdown pass.

Gallopin' George

The question as to who will be the starting tailback may have been answered. George Jones rushed for 145 yards on 11 carries and two touchdowns, making it tough to ignore him come Sept. 2 when SDSU faces Cal in the season opener.

"I was more comfortable with the offense this week than last week," Jones said. "Last week I was still learning as we were going along, so it was tough. But I'm not satisfied because I still have a lot to learn."

The transfer from Bakersfield College has been neckand-neck with Michigan transfer Dayna Overton, who rushed for 7 yards on eight carries. However, Overton was playing behind the second team line, and that may have been a factor.

"Some of the best runs today," Tollner said, "were made by Dayna when he should have lost 5 yards and gained a yard instead. It isn't easy when there is nowhere to go.

"George made some good cuts, and he broke some tackles, but it's because he got the chances. It's hard for a back to make a run if he can't get through the initial hole. It is up to the line to make the initial hole."

Jones agreed that Overton did not receive spectactular blocking.

"Even though the other running backs didn't have any holes, they ran hard. It doesn't matter, whoever starts, we are going to support each other."

Tollner has yet to name a starter, saying that it does not matter which of the backs start because both will see plenty of action.

Coming along fine

New Aztecs Sam Lawanson and Nathaniel Jacquet both played on Friday, as Lawanson started at outside linebacker and Jacquet saw some time at cornerback.

Jacquet, a transfer from Mt. SAC, was given limited action, but learning the defense should not be too difficult.

"This is a great program for me because this is the same defense I played in junior college," Jacquet said. "I'm not real worried about starting right now, I'm just concerned about constantly moving up, improving."

This was just his third day in pads with the Aztecs, as he was not eligible to play until Thursday.

Lawanson comes to Montezuma Mesa from Fresno City College, and as it stands now, would join Craigus Thompson and Joe Tuipala as the starting linebackers. Tuipala is challenging incumbent starter Dwight Chornomud for the other outside linebacker spot. Chornomud missed last spring's drills with a stomach injury.

Lawanson said Friday's performance was a learning experience for the Aztec defense.

"These things happen, and we're going to fix it," Lawanson said. "It's better to have it happen today than on Saturday (against Cal). But we are going to fix it, and by Saturday night things will be all right."

Noel 'n' Pete, Pete 'n' Noel

One area that the team has nothing to worry about is the punting game.

Noel Prefontaine punted four times on Friday, with an average of 46.3 yards. Last Saturday he had another impressive day, with a 60 and 58-yard boomer.

Peter Holt was 4-4 on field goal attempts, splitting the uprights from 22, 33, 35 and 39 yards.

Aztec notes

California's top pass receiver, Iheanyi Uwaezuoke will be sidelined up to six weeks, meaning he will miss the Golden Bears' season opener against SDSU.

Uwaezuoke sustained a ligament injury to his left thumb on Wednesday trying to catch a pass in practice.

WAC stripped of Freedom, denied Independence

Third place WAC football team is left without a bowl commitment

By ANDREW SAMUELSON Daily Aztec Asst. Sports Editor

Tust when the Western Athletic Confer-eastern school slips to six or seven victories and is available.

San Diego State, which has struggled to reach the upper half of the conference standings, could be denied a bowl even if they secure third place.

"I don't think it changes anyone's motivation on the team," Aztec Athletic Director Rick Bay said. "I certainly don't think anyone's saying, 'gosh even if we get third place, we might not go to a bowl.' Our goal starting off the season is to win the championship." Freedom Bowl officials attempted to lure local fans by inviting the number three school from the Pac-Ten.

Attendance continued to lag despite the support WAC teams gave it.

"We've been with the Freedom Bowl for the past two years and it's been good to us," Utah Athletic Director Chris Hill said. "We sent 10,000 people down to Anaheim each year to watch the game. The alumni enjoyed it."

SDSU attended the game in '91, losing to Tulsa 28-17.

The bowl will best be remembered for its '92 game, when Southern Cal was upset by Fresno State, ending Larry Smith's tenure at USC.

• J ence made strides last year to reshape its nationwide Rodney Dangerfield image, the bowl accepting its third place football team canceled its game this year.

The Freedom Bowl in Anaheim canceled the 1995 game, but could recontinue in '96.

With the cancellation news, WAC officials petitioned other bowls to send its third place team.

The Indepence Bowl and the Liberty Bowl were the only available post-season games that hadn't committed to other conferences and the Independence Bowl decided to remain unattached.

"I was surprised the Independence Bowl didn't make a commitment," WAC Commissioner Karl Benson said. "But from their standpoint, the number three WAC team is going to be available whether or not they make a commitment now or later."

A strong showing of nine wins will probably send the WAC's number three team to the Independence Bowl, but the possibility of a snub remains if a traditionally strong SDSU head coach Ted Tollner reiterated Bay's statement.

"I think it's always nice to know there's a variety of opportunities out there for you," Tollner said. "But you shouldn't be worried about that until October or November when you're battling and there isn't an opportunity for first place."

Brigham Young Athletic Director Rhondo Felburg said he was disappointed with the cancellation of the Freedom Bowl.

"You wish your team was number one or two, but for a third place team in our conference, it's a great bowl to go to," Felburg said. "Given my choice of Liberty, Indepence or Freedom, I'd go with the Freedom Bowl."

The game had been plagued by a history of low fan support in the Anaheim community. Traditionally, the game struggled to bring in 40,000 fans.

• Forward Susan Mendez. She was a four-year varsity player at Villa Park High School in Orange County, including an All-CIF selection for the Spartans. Mendez led her club team, the South Bay Gunners, in scoring and helped them reach the Western Regional finals.

• Junior Kellie Hurl. Clegg's lone junior college recruit. She transferred from Mesa Community College where she participated on the first ever women's team there and earned All-Conference honors in '94 and '95 at the sweeper position. She also competed on the track team for Mesa, finishing third in the state on the 4x400m relay team.

• Goalkeeper Marie Dillon. An All-League and All-CIF selection at El Modena High School in Orange, Calif., Dillon also lettered in tennis.

Senior midfielder Lynn Murray is excited about the play of the new recruits.

"They are all serious about playing soccer," Murray said. "They are all strong players and have positive attitudes."

Reese Cicchinelli, a senior forward, said she expects the offense to benefit from the speedy players.

"With Catherine in the middle we can work the ball up through her and let her push it outside," Cicchinelli said. "Stefanie has a lot of speed outside and Susan is adding a lot to our team inside."

Along with the recruits, Clegg has five other newcomers on this year's squad.

• Shellee Stucker, a redshirt freshman defender from Edison High School in Huntington Beach, is coming off of a knee injury suffered in the Spring of '93 and is the younger sister of Aztec fullback Stefanie Stucker. She was a member of Fountain Valley Spirit Club Team which won the national championship in '94.

She was an All-League performer following her senior season and league MVP after her junior year. Freshman defender Laura Walshe was a four-year varsity player for the Dana Hills Dolphins in Dana Point, Calif., and led her team to the '92 CIF semifinals. Walshe was also selected as scholar-athlete in '95. • Shannon Cuthbertson, a freshman defender from Huntington Beach, helped lead her Marina High School Vikings to the championship three straight years from 1993-95. Cuthbertson was the defensive MVP of the Sunset League last season. • Allegra Garcia is a senior transfer goalkeeper from San Francisco State University where she played the '94 season as the starting goalkeeper. Prior to attending SFSU, she played two years at Irvine Valley College. Garcia played her prep years at El Toro High School and helped lead them to a CIF championship.

The Daily Aztec

Voice your opinion to the sports world

The Daily Aztec welcomes letters and guest columns from readers. Submissions must include your name, major, class standing and phone number to verify information.

Faculty and staff should include position and department, along with a telephone number. Letters should be typed and legibly written, and no longer than two pages. Guest columns and commentaries should be threeto-four typewritten pages. The Daily Aztec sports section reserves the right to edit all submissions for clarity, space and libel. Submission does not guarantee publication, but if it's well written or creative, you can pretty much count on it.

For more information, contact Ferris Shahrestani or Andrew Samuelson at 594-7817, or drop by The Daily Aztec in the PSFA building, Room 361. You can also email your response to shahrest@mail.sdsu.edu.

Sportswriters Wanted

The Daily Aztec sports section, voted the second best in the state of California for the 1994-95 school year, is seeking knowledgeable and enthusiastic individuals who are interested in writing sports.

All SDSU students – male and female, journalism and non-journalism majors – are encouraged to apply.

The Daily Aztec currently has seven writers on staff and is looking for contributors for the remainder of the semester. We're looking for responsible individuals who are willing to make a commitment.

Working at The Daily Aztec will give you the opportunity to practice interviewing, taking notes, writing with a deadline, beat coverage as well as allow you to experience working in a newsroom.

If you're interested, pick up an application at The Daily Aztec, PSFA building, Room 361. Or call Ferris Shahrestani at 594-7817 for more information.
