Marketing survey delays carny plans

by Linda Howanietz
Daily Aztec staff writer

Associated Students Council voted Wednesday to limit action on the planned Springfest carnival, at least until a marketing survey can be completed.

The council approved spending no more than $3,000 on preparations until the results of the survey are available.

The carnival, planned for May 4 and 5, would include rides, booths and other entertainment. The event is scheduled to run concurrently with a university open house.

A.S. last week approved Springfest, despite criticisms that the project might lose as much as $9,000 the first year.

Steve Zola, Business College representative, made the original recommendation to wait for the survey.

"The people in marketing feel it's ridiculous that we go ahead. If the Springfest is our first priority, let's spend a few extra dollars and know what the students and the public feel about it," he said.

Zola proposed a similar action at last week's council meeting, despite objections made by the original proposal and budget planning committee. Its report included studies of similar carnivals, such as UCLA's Mardi Gras.

The council had difficulty agreeing on how much to spend on SPACE TALKS—Marty Block from the Student Resource and Information Center discusses Wednesday the Aztec Center office space allocation policy for student groups. Block, involved in Associated Student affairs, will move his office to the center.

Aztec Board juggles office space to satisfy demands

by Julie Brenner
Daily Aztec staff writer

Despite earlier objections, the Black Student Union will share office space with the Gay and Lesbian Student Union in Aztec Center.

MEChA's request to stay in its current quarters was also honored, so a student adviser will instead occupy one quarter of room 158 along with the Women's Resource Center. MEChA will remain in rooms 179 and 180.

On Monday, BSU President Jennifer Brown told the Aztec Center Board that the GLSU was unwelcome to share space in room 158. But that situation was not addressed at Wednesday's meeting.

Frank Holmes, Minority Engineering Program director, recommended that Marty Block, Student Resource and Information Center adviser, be moved into room 158 and that MEChA remain in its present location.

Some student organization officials accused the Aztec Center Board of "prioritizing" Block's needs over the needs of student organizations.

Hermelinda Rocha, MEChA chairwoman, asked Block where he believed he would be most effective. She said she was concerned that the board might not have considered his views.

Block said Associated Students officials wanted him to move to room 158 because, as President Thomas Day's designee to the council, he suffered from inaccessibility.

Block said he deals primarily with the A.S., and student organizations frequently present him with questions. However, he said he would be willing to give up the two office spaces assigned to him by A.S.

Block said he expected to expand his space requirement if his needs increased.

The Paper Chase has a one-year lease with A.S. If the lease is not renewed next year, Block said, he may be able to occupy some or all of that space.

But Jim Corridan, Aztec Board chairman, said the board prohibits any student group from occupying more than 225 square feet of office space. Block therefore could not expand in room 158 and perhaps limit the space of other tenants.

Corridan said that, if the lease with the Paper Chase is not renewed and Block needs more space, Block will be moved into the existing Paper Chase location.

Other student organization officials said the Aztec Center Board should concentrate more on the immediate needs of its groups.

Wine, cheese party launches vote drive

by Julie Brenner
Daily Aztec staff writer

The first major effort since the latest fee increase to give students a powerful voice in government was launched Tuesday evening by several of San Diego's own political figures.

Associated Students sponsored the free "wine and cheese rally" that attracted more than 100 students.

Celia Ballesteros, a California State University trustee and City Council candidate; school board candidate Susan Davis; and Newsline publisher Larry Remer were among the speakers who urged students to register to vote and voice their opinions to elected officials.

Prof searching for financing for cost-saving wheelchairs

by Jim Trageser
Daily Aztec staff writer

An electric wheelchair that could save quadriplegics hundreds of thousands of dollars in medical costs has been designed by an SDSU professor.

The wheelchair, designed to prevent pressure sores, is being developed by mechanical engineering professor Gene Nelson.

Nelson made a working prototype, which he rides around campus, and is looking for $40,000 to build four more.

Nelson, paralyzed from the shoulders down since 1956, got the idea for the chair from his own needs. After his injury, he spent all his time in a wheelchair or bed, causing pressure sores to form. These required annual surgery.

The operations required a three-month hospital stay, Nelson said, and cost him about $250,000.

Nelson was first injured in a high school football game, when hit in the neck and paralyzed for a year. But he learned to walk again and earned a degree in mechanical engineering from SDSU.

He worked for 20 years at Solar Aircraft Company, married, and had four children. But in 1956 the old spinal injury became inflamed, causing permanent paralysis.

When he was approaching retirement at Solar, he built the first of his "Nelson Reclini-Chairs." This wheelchair differed from conventional chairs because it has controls to vary the position of the back of the chair to relieve pressure spots and prevent sores.

80 feared dead after boat sinks boat carrying more than 100 people burned and sank in shark-infested Lake Nicaragua before dawn Wednesday, and more than 80 passengers are feared dead, rescuers said.

Julio Martinez, a boat owner who joined the search for survivors, said 26 passengers from the Santa Elena were picked up and taken to the nearby port of Granada. But he said no others were found in the salt-water lake, the nation's largest.

"The truth is that, after a long search, we couldn't find any others, and, because of that, we think they drowned," Martinez said in a telephone interview from Granada, 25 miles south of the capital of Managua.

Andropov assails U.S. arms offer

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov on Wednesday condemned what he called American "unwillingness to conduct serious talks of any kind" on arms control.

He dismissed the "so-called new move" by President Reagan to limit nuclear weapons in Europe as nothing essentially different from previous U.S. proposals.

The official news agency Tass carried excerpts of what it said was a statement Wednesday by Andropov containing the Kremlin leader's first reaction to Reagan's new offer.

Reagan told the United Nations on Monday that Washington was willing to forego deployment of an unspecified number of the 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles that NATO plans to start installing in Europe in December. He said the United States was willing to negotiate reducing the number of planes able to carry nuclear weapons if the Soviet Union reduced its medium-range missile force.

Reagan's offer was conditional on Soviet readiness to reduce its force of an estimated 351 SS-20 missiles and other SS-4 and SS-5 missiles targeted on Western Europe.

Troops urged to leave Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Syria's foreign minister told the United States and other Western nations Wednesday they should withdraw their peacekeeping troops from Lebanon because they are "posing a grave threat to security and peace" in the Middle East.

"They remind us of the colonialist expeditions through previous stages of the history of the region," Abdul Halim Khaddam said of the 5,400-member force made up of U.S. Marines and troops from France, Italy and Britain.

In an address to the 38th U.N. General Assembly, Khaddam said nothing about withdrawing the estimated 50,000 Syrian troops from Lebanon but insisted that Israeli troops withdraw unconditionally.

He said the May 17 Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement, which the United States helped negotiate, violates Lebanese sovereignty and should be considered "null and void."

Khaddam blamed both Israeli and the United States for the fighting and turmoil in Lebanon and accused Washington of taking sides in Lebanon's civil war.

Burford admits to 'flip statement'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Anne M. Burford admitted today she may have made a "flip statement" that she held up a $6 million Superfund cleanup grant to avoid giving credit to former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., but she told Congress her decision to delay the cleanup money had nothing to do with politics.

Under sharp questioning from Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., Burford, in her first appearance before a Congressional hearing since resigning, said she held up the grant for cleanup of the Stringfellow hazardous-waste dump near Riverside because she was concerned about the state-federal split in financing the cleanup and there was no immediate danger to the public.

Slattery told Burford that the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee had a memorandum in which eyewitnesses quoted Burford as saying, "I'll be damned if I'm going to let Brown take credit for the cleanup."

Slattery said the statement was made at a luncheon Aug. 4, 1982, aboard the presidential yacht Sequoia.

Student files $135,000 suit against SDSU

by Colleen Kapalla
Daily Aztec staff writer

An SDSU student is suing the university for at least $135,000 in damages from an accident she suffered in January.

The Superior Court lawsuit, filed last week by Judy Lynn Longfellow, lists personal-injury damages, premises liability and negligence as its complaints. Michael John Kerr, operator of TKO Construction, was also named.

Longfellow is suing for general damages and medical expenses totaling $35,000 and for punitive damages of $100,000.

SDSU hired TKO Construction to excavate six sections of courtyard pavement in front of the Music Building, which left at least six holes. Each hole was about 10 feet square and 1 1/2 to 3 feet deep, the claim states. The holes were located in areas used by students for walking to and from classes.

Longfellow said that, at about noon on Jan. 27, she was walking from the East Commons to the Music Building. It was raining hard, and she said she was walking slowly to avoid slipping.

Suddenly, Longfellow said, she found no concrete under her feet but, rather, an excavated hole that had been filled by rainwater. The surface appeared to be a rain-slickened piece of concrete, she said.

Longfellow claims she fell in the hole, sprained her ankle, cut her foot and suffered bruises. She said she also injured her lower back, which impaired her health, strength and activity. She reported that she sustained injury to her nervous system and that the accident is causing her great mental pain and suffering.

The claim states that SDSU and TKO Construction were grossly negligent because both failed to adequately protect against injury and placed no barricades or warnings of any kind.

According to Longfellow, there was no evidence of excavation equipment, security officers, grounds personnel or announcements of any type to sufficiently warn her of danger.

Voting

"Fee increases will continue because students aren't a solid voting block," said Scott Sawyer, voter registration coordinator for Associated Students.

Sawyer said the state Legislature will keep cutting the education budget and increasing tuition because students do not exercise their right to vote and possibly change the decisions of the Legislature.

"You don't see Legislature cutting social security. That's because old people vote," said Roxanne Cooper, county coordinator for the student voter campaign.

Cooper said the senior citizens are the most organized lobbying group in the nation. She said she believes that if students voted they could create a constituency to which government officials would have to listen.

In the '60s and early '70s, the student vote was a "swing vote" and has slowly diminished, Cooper said.

The rally was part of a statewide effort to increase the number of student voters. Efforts have been aimed at the University of California schools, California State universities and junior colleges.

"The UC system is supposed to be coordinating the drive," said Dave Hamu, a member of the Statewide Educational Rights Network (STERN). "However, they have backed down on active registration and are working on raising money to channel into the June 1984 campaign."

He said this shift in effort was the result of the cancellation of the reapportionment special election in December.

"The UC system should have continued their efforts because the campaign recently registered 800 voters in five days at UCSD," Hamu said.

A.S. President Chris Wakeman told students at the rally that he has set a goal to register the entire SDSU student body.

"There's a lot of things that I am angry about, such as parking, library hours and fee increases," he said. By voting, students could have more influence on those issues, he said.

SDSU English professor Prescott Nichols told students that three things happen when fees are raised.

"We lose enrollment, the quality of education is lowered and discrimination is present," he said. Nichols said he believes these three characteristics are evident at SDSU.

"In my opinion, SDSU is a whites' university," Nichols said, getting a round of applause.

"The folks in La Jolla and Rancho Bernardo receive better treatment because they vote," said City Council candidate Ballesteros.

"We cannot gripe about increased fees or tuition if we fail to exercise our constitutional right to vote," she said.

Newsline publisher Remer, a "Point/Counterpoint" regular on the Channel 8 news, agreed.

"What really bugs me is the amount of matters that have been decided by a handful of people," he said. "I don't care what your political affiliation is, you should vote because there is a lot riding on it."

Voter registration coordinator

Sawyer asked students to volunteer their time to register other students. He said that he might offer a reward to the volunteer who registers the most people.

Humanitarian

In times like these, when students are a nuisance to professors and education is intended to train students for a place in the labor force, David M. Fulcomer is a breath of fresh air.

Fulcomer, chairman of the School of Family Studies and Consumer Sciences, is the embodiment of the unpolluted spirit of academics. After 50 years of teaching, his enjoyment of interaction with, and dedication to, students has not diminished. Neither has his understanding of the true goal of education: helping humans understand what it means to be a human.

Fulcomer should serve as a reminder to us all — students, faculty and administrators — of what we are here for.

Values must be changed

Editor:

Shawn Dooley's letter in the Daily Aztec (Sept. 21) confirms my fears of the true naivete of a large portion of the population. His reaction to Schleuss' expression of apathy toward the grave condition of our world displayed his blind belief in a world political system that does not work.

In a world where millions die of hunger or hunger-related disease every year, where fellow human beings separated only by land and water are on the brink of destroying each other with a nuclear holocaust and where we contaminate and destroy our natural resources with no concern for tomorrow, can we say what we are doing is working?

What is required is not a change of government, not a new regime, nor a different system. We must all take a deep look at our own values and priorities. We must look within ourselves to see what really matters. When we begin to live as genuine human beings, only then can we approach our world's predicament with any hope of resolve.

Parking ban is inefficient

Editor:

Removing the student parking on Remington Road and surrounding neighborhoods would be an effective way to insure homeowners a place to park. This would be achieved, however, at the expense of efficiency.

Virtually every house (if not all houses) has a driveway and garage. These areas are already protected by existing traffic regulations. Most of these homeowners, I assume, have no more than two cars. It doesn't seem too hard to be able to park one in the garage and the other in the driveway. If the garage was full, perhaps these people could pilot the second craft alongside the first in the driveway. I feel that since many of the homeowners could park in the manner mentioned above, the restriction of these spaces would waste an already limited supply.

The university has a peculiar policy of issuing as many parking permits as students have money for, regardless of the actual number of spaces available. This is evident in the west-side dorms as well. On virtually any school night, finding a space in the dorm lots is rarely possible. In the past, these people parked on Remington or the neighborhood to the west. By removing this as an option, it seems that it takes with it the consideration of letting the students park even near their home. As students, we don't even have the guarantee of our driveways.

Parking is by no means a new problem, but the solution is not in removing spaces.

Ken Foster
marketing junior

Parking ban is not needed

Editor:

I oppose the proposal for a ban on student parking in residential areas around SDSU for two reasons.

First, we all pay taxes, not just the homeowners, and we all should have an equal opportunity to park in public spaces. Second, if the ban were imposed, where would all of the students that park there now go? Most likely they would be displaced to other neighborhoods creating the same problem there. I think a better solution can be found; in fact, I have one in mind.

The fundamental problem is basic economics: there are more cars to be parked than available parking spaces at SDSU. Solution: create more parking spaces at SDSU. Although costly, another parking structure on any of the existing one-level lots (like the pit) would help tremendously. The pressure on our neighbors would be eased along with the thousands of SDSU students that daily can't find a place to park. Finances could be derived from parking fees, parking violations and the California State University system. Why don't we channel our efforts toward obtaining popular and financial support for this more equitable solution, one where both parties benefit, rather than one which will only displace the problem and heat the controversy?

Incidentally, even if this ban does become reality, the residents should definitely pay a $10 yearly fee, if not more. If they are going to have exclusive parking privileges, they had better be prepared to pay for it. Additionally, a portion of those fees should go into a fund to create more parking at SDSU. I hope, however, that this does not become necessary.

Men can help prevent rape

Editor:

A deplorable act was reported in the San Diego Union (Sept. 20) in which a 16-year-old girl was raped while men stood by and not only did nothing, but cheered. This type of brutal infringement on an individual's rights must be stopped.

The best way to end this insane behavior is through modifying other males' behavior.

As reported by the Union, two men held the girl down while another raped her. The other men in the restroom where the tragedy occurred either stood by or cheered. If there had been just one among the crowd of "sheep" that would have raised a voice in protest, perhaps others would have followed suit. As it turned out, the room was full of cowards to whom dissent was a probable indication of non-machismo.

The fact that no one in the room at the time attempted to stop the scum from committing the atrocity is not, however, the main issue. The major concern is that some men have degenerated to a point at which rape not only occurs, but is condoned.

Where does this acceptance of violent behavior come from? It comes from the socialization of males in the military, fraternities and other male institutions.

This is where the acceptance of violence must be stopped.

If many men would express their utter revulsion to rape it would have an influence on the actions of others. Men in leadership roles are especially important. When an inappropriate remark is heard regarding action toward a woman, it should be reprimanded by other men present. Going against an accepted norm will take a strong backbone considering the potential for peer pressure. Knowing, however, that you have benefited society in a small way will make your stand worth your while. It might be that if many of us express outrage, the number of rapes will be curtailed.

For any woman to be raped is deplorable, but your action may stop a would-be rapist from attacking your mother, sister or other woman in your own life.

I cannot condone physical punishment for these emotionally retarded rapists (as much as my initial impulses tell me otherwise) and so must strive to stop the crime from occurring in the first place.

We do have the power, and the responsibility, as individuals to prevent rape.

Eddy Barber
epidemiology and biostatistics graduate student.

Voters are content with Reagan's form

"Ronald Reagan is a great president."

Although this kind of statement may raise eyebrows when made in a traditional liberal stronghold like a campus newspaper, no one can doubt its accuracy.

Lest you think that I've been contaminated by exposure to toxic radiation and/or public relations majors, let me assure you that I have not yet joined a fraternity, and I still don't read the Union if I can avoid it.

Maybe I should rephrase it to read, "Reagan is great at being president." To the public at large, he comes off as being jaunty and jovial, with an air of tough but fair authority. You know, kind of the Walter Alston of Pennsylvania Avenue.

He is self-confident, quick-witted (most of the time) and seems resilient enough to weather any storm. His presidential addresses sound like the ones Spencer Tracy used to make. If it weren't for the fact that he's completely incompetent, he'd be perfect.

Anyway, this should not be any obstacle to another Reagan conquest next November. In American politics, form, not substance, counts.

You see, all this stuff about the escalation of the war in Lebanon and the collapse of America's public education system is a bit too much for the folks in North Platte (or North Park for that matter).

The voters of the '80s want to avoid such complicated and disturbing problems, so they place their trust in this image of benign leadership. He may be nothing more than an image, but that is all people in the video age require.

What about Reagan's problems in the polls? What about the much-publicized "gender gap." An insignificant crevice.

While the president may be less popular with women, he is by no means unpopular.

In a recent Los Angeles Times poll, 56 percent of the women surveyed said Reagan was "a strong leader."

Apparently it is both Mr. and Mrs. Middle America who sit placidly before the screen, allowing outdated patriotism to trickle down their cheeks while listening to their leader's inspiring promises of an idyllic Anglo-Saxon Andy Hardy fantasyland.

But what about the opposition of minorities and the students? No problem.

Although he has not been able to feed Hispanics his policies as readily as he fed the queen enchiladas, Reagan does not really need to worry about courting the minority vote. He's won big without Latin and black support before, and he'll do it again.

Students, because they don't vote, are powerless to oppose the administration's educational "reforms." Maybe they're just too ignorant and lazy. Maybe in their short-sighted "pragmatism," they are unconcerned with the decline of education, favoring instead the interests of the corporate elite they hope to join.

If you're looking for evidence of this claim, try exploring the Bermuda triangle of majors like business, marketing and advertising. The bright, ambitious, educated youth of America's Finest City seem to have all the political awareness of styrofoam.

But don't worry. Get yourself a beer, and we can all watch Reagan play president for another four years. Act II of his greatest performance is expected to include such dramatic moments as the return of the recession, a dazzling sequence of budget cuts and, if we're real lucky, a battle scene.

Expert helps make facts more memorable

by Diana L. Chapman
Daily Aztec staff writer

David Markoff was not just a bad student — he was a terrible student.

His highest grades were Cs when he attended New York's Queens College, but he more often got Ds.

It took Markoff, who has been called a genius, 5 1/2 years to graduate, and when he did, he was at the bottom of his class.

At least that's what Markoff said today, now that he can memorize 50 numbers in less than three minutes.

And he has other impressive tricks, too. He said he studied only one day for the California Real Estate exam and passed. And he can memorize 200 names at a time.

Sometimes called "The Memory Man," Markoff has appeared on campus and performed for small SDSU audiences to promote his memory training seminar.

Markoff exhibited his memory abilities Tuesday in Aztec Center by asking students to give him numbers, which he wrote down on a board. After he wrote down 50 numbers, he turned his back away from both the audience and the board and shot the numbers back out loud — first forward, then backward.

But an hour after Markoff gave his performance a former student of his approached.

"Hello," said the student. "Do you remember my name?"

"No," said Markoff. "But why don't I remember your name?"

"You cannot remember everything. Could you be responsible for being perfect on a test of 20 vocabulary words given a week from now?" The answer is yes.

"Could you be responsible for remembering the names of people you met in the last two years? The answer is no because, number one, it's an extraordinary amount of information and, number two, you didn't know you were going to be asked, so you couldn't prepare for it."

But there's no question that Markoff is a memory expert — even though he said he was 34 when he really was 35. "Oops, I forgot my own age," Markoff said laughingly and shook his head.

Over the last 12 years, Markoff gained widespread acclaim and has appeared on both the Mike Douglas Show and the Today show — all because he was not only an awful student, but a frustrated one.

"When I took tests, I got nervous, and my mind would block," Markoff said. "I had no way to concentrate when I did study. The way you do well on tests is by having the ability to take information out of your mind and put it on a piece of paper. I couldn't do that."

Markoff's problems in school led him to the self-improvement catalog in the library. He wanted to learn how to memorize. In the files, he said, he found a Greek memorization system several centuries old.

Markoff adopted the system, and is now founder of the Markoff Memory Training school, he said.

Markoff is convinced that anyone can learn his method of memorization. It starts with steering away from repetition — which is the way most people learn to memorize — and using what he calls COV: creativity, organization and visual.

Markoff trains his students to associate what they need to remember with a visual aide to make the subject seem more tangible — but for that, Markoff said, a person needs to learn to be creative and organized.

"Take the name Richard," Markoff said. "You make the name into a picture."

Wheelchair

Nelson said that he has been in the chair for two years and in that time has had no pressure sores.

However, he wanted to develop the chair further.

And "I got bored being retired," he said.

Nelson offered to teach here for free in exchange for facilities and student help.

But a lack of funds is slowing progress on the chair, Nelson said. He applied for grants from automotive corporations in Detroit, from insurance companies that must pay hospital bills for quadriplegics and from the government. The only company expressing any interest was United Airlines, but nothing has happened yet.

Nelson estimated that the chairs will cost between $6,000 and $8,000. A conventional electric wheelchair that does not prevent sores costs $4,000.

Nelson said if $40,000 for surgery to repair a pressure sore is considered, $8,000 for his chair is quite reasonable.

Nelson said that he tries to encourage his students to come up with projects in the field of bio-engineering, or engineering to meet human needs.

Nelson said that Donald N. Sharp Memorial Hospital's rehabilitation center works closely with his class. Students with projects in bio-engineering go to the rehabilitation center to get ideas on the needs of the physically handicapped. After they design and build their projects, they return to Sharp to test them on the patients.

Nelson is trying to get the Department of Mechanical Engineering and the Department of Industrial Studies to work together on bio-engineering projects. He said that industrial studies professors Gerald Bailey and Dennis Dirksen have been working closely with him, along with mechanical engineering seniors Don Archibald and Marty Firestone.

One of his goals is to increase publicity about his program here at SDSU. Nelson said he believes that if he can get attention, he may get the funds he needs to help other quadriplegics through his work.

When he retired from Solar Aircraft, Nelson built his own house, including many devices to enable him to live on his own. Among these are wide doors to accommodate his wheelchair, an overhead lift in the ceiling to carry him from his bed to his chair and electric door openers.

He also has a live-in housekeeper and a male attendant. His home is only a mile from campus, so he can ride his chair to and from work.

Nelson said that the hardest thing he has had to deal with in his life was becoming paralyzed again after 20 years.

"I thought I had it made. I had a family, a career. I had everything going for me," he said.

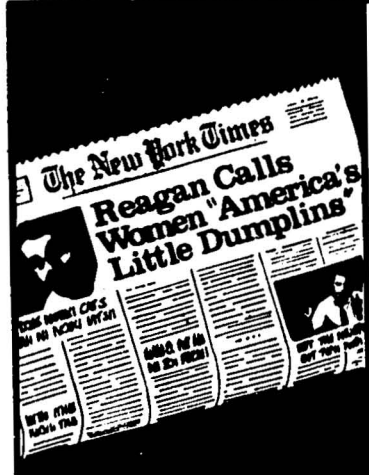

After 30 years of marriage, his wife left him because of the paralysis, Nelson said.

He said that he had to readjust his whole life after the paralysis returned. He believes that all the problems he has had to overcome were caused by the paralysis.

Nelson's advice to college students: "First of all, get a philosophy on life that gives you a positive outlook on things. Don't be negative. Don't accept any discouraging thing as being a permanent thing. Get off your butt and do something!"

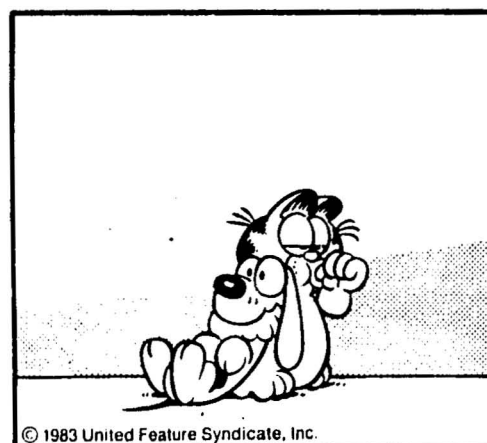

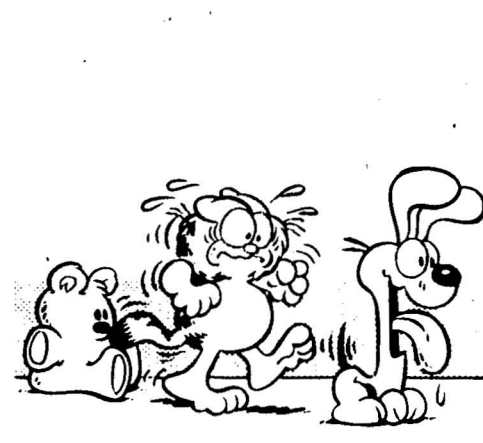

"I never thought I could be a college professor, but here I am."

Few opportunities for SDSU blood donors

by Joe Shoulak
Daily Aztec contributor

A short supply of nearby blood drives limits opportunities for many SDSU students and faculty who are willing to donate.

This semester's first blood drive was sponsored by the Catholic Newman Center on Sept. 21. One hundred ninety-three people donated a pint of blood each.

But many were turned away one half hour before the event was scheduled to end because of the overwhelming turnout of donors, said the Rev. Bill Rowland of the Newman Center.

During the 1982-83 school year there were only four blood drives in Casa Real at SDSU — two of which were sponsored by the Newman Center, Rowland said. He described the latest blood drive as a "phenomenal success," but said he was disappointed at the number of people turned away.

Debbie Syverson, San Diego Bloodmobile coordinator, said that the infrequency of campus blood drives results from a lack of SDSU organizations willing to sponsor the event.

"The (Aztec Center) Casa Real is most convenient as far as space and location at SDSU, but they won't allow me to request the space for a blood drive," Syverson said.

Instead, Syverson said, she must first have a student organization submit a request for a blood drive to the Aztec Center Board. The student organization must then be responsible for promoting the event, setting it up and closing it down.

An Aztec Center Board representative said, however, the bloodmobile does not necessarily need a student organization to secure a reservation for the event in Casa Real.

The representative said that the board, composed of SDSU students, faculty and staff, has "never been approached by the bloodmobile but would probably entertain the idea."

However, the source said that sponsorship by a student organization does help as far as following up on the paperwork involved as well as promotion of the event.

"Generally speaking, the reservation schedule for Casa Real is usually crowded, but we still have some openings," the representative said.

Besides the Newman Center, the ROTC, the Greek system, residence halls and students-at-large have sponsored past blood drives, Syverson said.

"I would be very receptive to the idea of having the bloodmobile visit SDSU once a month," Syverson said. "We average over 200 pints of blood each day at SDSU. That's why I'd really like to set up two days in a row," she said.

Syverson attributed the heavy turnout of SDSU donors to the fact that many people are either unaware of the main blood donation center on Upas Street or lack transportation. The convenience of having a blood donation center visit SDSU has always proven very successful, Syverson said.

Also, campus blood drives "enhance the relations between SDSU and the community," said Dr. Kevin Patrick, director of SDSU's Health Services.

Patrick says that although Health Services does not benefit directly — because most blood transfusions take place in nearby hospitals — blood drives are "useful and helpful" to the health of the community. He encouraged the idea of having the bloodmobile frequently on campus.

Garretson records booters' second straight shutout

Aztecs continue to roll, BYU is latest victim, 5-0

by Mark Kragen
Daily Aztec sportswriter

The SDSU soccer team made it two shutout wins in a row Wednesday night as it defeated BYU 5-0 at Aztec Bowl.

"We really hammered a good team. I like beating BYU," SDSU Coach Chuck Clegg said. "I was really happy with the result. We're playing well."

It was a very physical game in which two yellow cards were handed out, one to each team.

"They got sort of frustrated more than anything else," said Clegg, explaining why the game became so physical. "We were much faster, and when you're faster, things are going to happen. If you're quicker to the ball, then the tackles are going to be late. We just beat them to the ball."

Both teams looked sloppy on defense in the first half. But the Aztecs scored twice within a minute to go on top 2-0 late in the first half.

SDSU's first goal was scored by freshman Jeff Ryder. Ryder got the rebound off a corner kick and zipped a shot which deflected off two Cougar defenders and past goalie Pat Ogan.

Less than a minute later, sophomore Steve Snyder, in only his third game back from an injury, scored on a pass from Jeff Ratajezak.

Captain Stevie Blackburne was pleased with the defense's performance.

"It was disorganized at first," Blackburne said. "I think the two goals settled us down."

Assistant coach Mitch Murray said, "Coming off a 13-0 victory and looking forward to a road trip, they were a little flat at first. When you win one 13-0, players think they have to play the same way."

The second half was dominated by the Aztecs.

"In the first half, we were very casual. We were lucky not to give up a goal," Clegg said. "In the second half, we played much better."

The second half scoring was started by Ryder, who added his second goal of the night on a beautiful cross from Ratajezak.

"I couldn't of asked for a better pass," Ryder said. "He threaded it through (the defenders) perfect."

The fourth goal came on a penalty kick after BYU's Joseph Ngassa pulled down Snyder who was going for a wide open shot.

Freshman Steve Boardman put the penalty kick into the left hand corner of the net.

The final goal came on junior Mike Hogan's header from 10 yards out. The assist went to freshmen Jeff Rodgers who, after burning a defender, hit a perfect cross to Hogan.

From then on, the Aztecs were concerned with keeping goalie John Garretson's shutout intact. Early in the first half, Garretson made a spec-

BUMPING IT HARSHLY—SDSU's Kim Harsch bumps the ball during a recent match. Harsch and the No. 10-ranked Aztecs take to the road this week, facing No. 15-ranked Arizona State at 7:30 tonight in Tempe.

Aztecs face Arizona, ASU

Two-game road trip is critical to spikers' WCAA title hopes

by Kirk Richardson
Daily Aztec sportswriter

In a conference as talent-laden as the WCAA, each team has to play every game as if it were the championship, or it will find itself out of the race.

Such is the case in women's volleyball. Four of the top 10 teams in the nation are in the WCAA, each with its sights set on a national championship.

The SDSU women's volleyball team will get a chance to see just how good it is when it faces two of the WCAA's best teams, back-to-back. The Aztecs begin a critical swing through Arizona with a match against Arizona State tonight at 7:30 in Tempe. Tomorrow, things won't get any easier as SDSU faces a tough Arizona squad in Tucson.

SDSU Coach Rudy Suwara said he is not excited about playing in Arizona.

"Playing in Arizona is tough," he said. "It's going to be a difficult trip for us. I hope the team rises to the occasion. We need to play as a team. I hate to see us come back 1-3 in conference."

Suwara said his players will have to stop making mental errors if they hope to get anywhere this season.

"Mentally is where we haven't been playing like a national contender, because we've had a tendency to make too many mistakes," he said. "For us to be a legitimate championship contender we have to have

'For us to be a legitimate championship contender we have to have better setting and better hustle on defense. We also need to pass better.'

better setting and better hustle on defense. We also need to pass better."

The Aztecs will have to be at their best to beat the Sun Devils. ASU is 3-4 this season, while SDSU is 16-4. But records don't tell the whole story. ASU, ranked No. 15 in the nation, has lost to a strong Tennessee team and USC, in a match that went five games. Last year the Trojans finished second in the nation. The Sun Devils' other two losses came at the hands of the Kentucky Wildcats, who, coincidentally, also beat the Aztecs twice earlier this season.

Suwara said he is concerned about ASU.

"They were very good last season," he said. "I really haven't seen them play this season. But if they can take USC to five games, they're probably very tough. To beat them, we're going to have to block better than we did against UCLA."

SDSU outside hitter Vicki Cantrell said she expects a hard-fought match.

"They always give us a good match when we go over there," Cantrell said. "I think we have a positive attitude, though. We're going with the attitude that we're going to win. We just have to play consistent."

Cantrell said the return of Toni Himmer will be a plus for the Aztecs.

"It feels really good to have her back," Cantrell said. "She may not be at her strongest point yet, but just having her on the court helps. It's so good to see her back out there."

Nebraska: 'The Best Team Ever?'

In 1938, the Duke Blue Devils' college football team went through an entire season without losing a game. As a matter of fact, that Duke team did not allow a point in the regular season. Talk about a "Doomsday Defense."

However, in the Rose Bowl that year, the "Iron Dukes" finally cracked when a fourth-string quarterback from USC named Doyle Nave hurled a touchdown pass to equally unknown Al Krueger with just under one minute to play in the game to beat the Blue Devils, 7-3, ruining what would have really been a perfect season.

Maybe it was because of that one touchdown that when The Sporting News recently held a poll to name the greatest college football team of all time, the 1938 Duke Blue Devils were overlooked.

Instead, an esteemed group of college coaches, including Ara Parseghian, Joe Paterno and Vince Dooley, voted the 1971 Nebraska Cornhuskers as the best team ever. Duke, incredibly, didn't even finish in the top 20.

Now, just two months after that poll was released, the '71 Cornhuskers are already being challenged — by Nebraska '83.

This year's edition of the Cornhuskers may just go down as the best team in college football history if their performance through the season's first four games is any indica-(Coach Tom Osborne said his team did not try to run up the score), the Cornhuskers romped past UCLA, 42-10. Nebraska had spotted the Bruins an early 10-0 lead.

In four games, Nebraska has scored an amazing 226 points, while yielding just 49. Even the 1938 Duke team would have trouble keeping this team off the scoreboard.

Chris Ello

tion.

In week one, Nebraska quieted any hopes that Penn State had of repeating as national champions, humiliating the Nittany Lions, 44-6, at Giants Stadium.

Next came the Wyoming Cowboys of the WAC. To Wyoming's credit, they did score 20 points. However, most of those were scored after Nebraska had built a 42-3 half-time lead en route to a 56-20 triumph.

After polishing off Minnesota 84-13

This week, Nebraska goes for five in a row against a Syracuse team that has a 3-1 record, but cannot be given much of a chance considering its one loss came at the hands of Temple, 17-6.

"Nebraska has a good team. We're a good team. It should be a good game," said Syracuse tailback Jamie Covington.

Good luck, Jamie.

This year's Nebraska team is dominating college football like no other team has in many years. Maybe since the '38 Blue Devils even.

Led by quarterback Turner Gill and tailback Mike Rozier, Nebraska figures to whip Syracuse this week, and everybody else in the coming weeks, on its way to a perfect season and a national title.

In fact, the Cornhuskers have probably already made their airplane and hotel reservations for a date in the Orange Bowl (to which the Big 8 champion receives an automatic bid) in Miami, Fla., Jan. 2.

If anybody can stop the Nebraska juggernaut, it may be Oklahoma in the final regular season game Nov. 26 at Norman, Okla. But it's doubtful.

In 1971, the Sooners were ranked No. 2 and were unbeaten entering the Nebraska contest, but were beaten, 35-31, in Norman. They won't hold the same credentials entering this season's matchup.

To beat Nebraska this year, it will take a really great team.

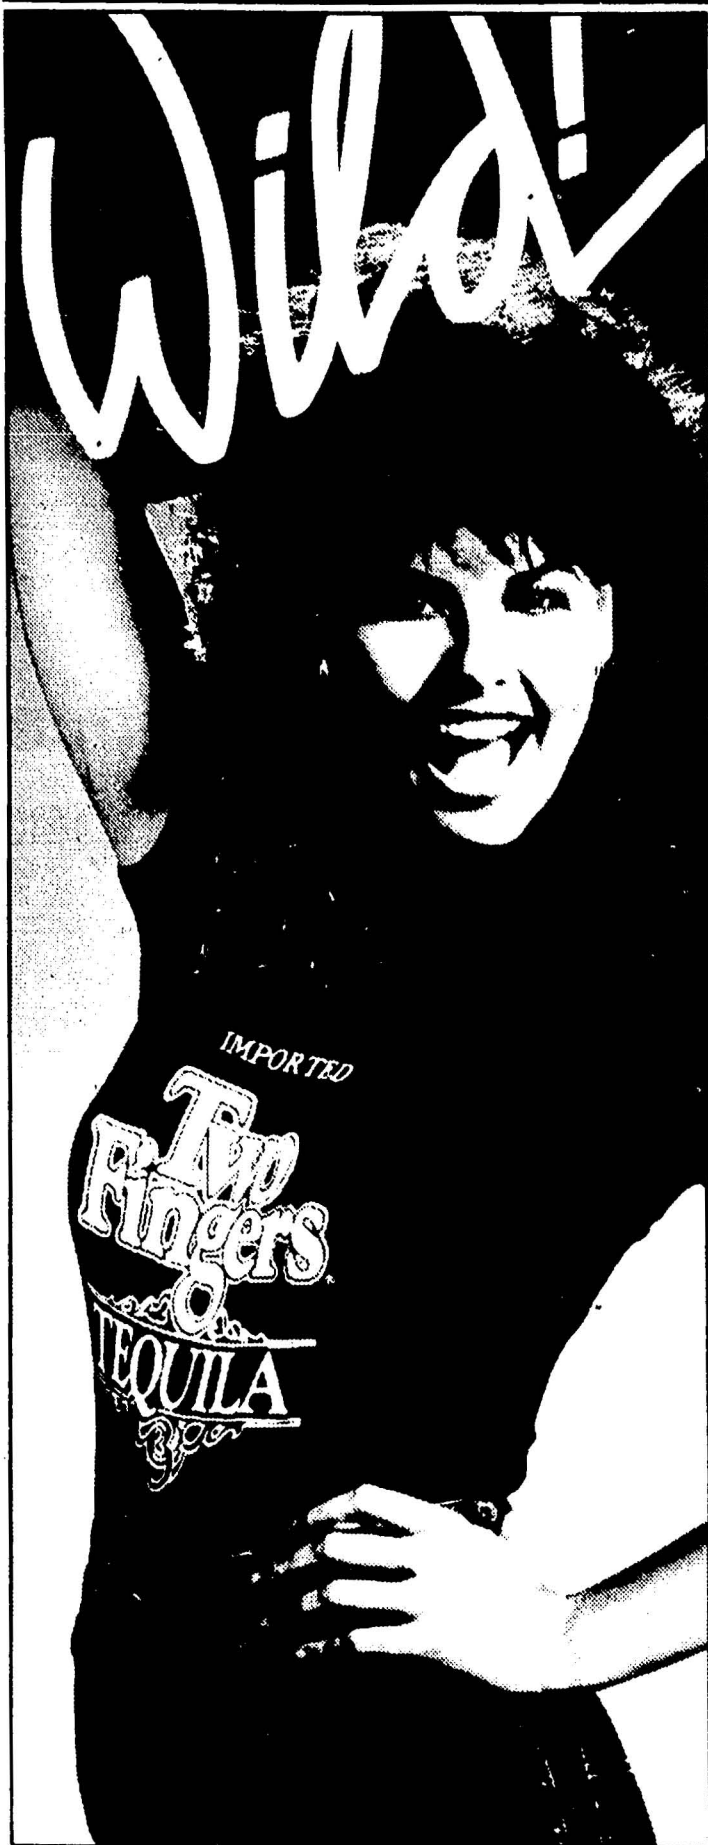

Maybe even the team of Doyle Nave and Al Krueger.

Men's soccer team signups are Oct. 8

The Mission Valley YMCA is now organizing a men's Speed Soccer League. The league will have a division for men between the ages of 18 and 29 and a league for men 30 and over. The 10-week league is scheduled to begin Oct. 8.

Signups are being taken at the YMCA, located at 5505 Friars Road in San Diego. A maximum of 16 players will be allowed on each squad. The cost per team is $300 with the fees going to pay for referees and other league costs.

The league will employ indoor rules and be played at an outdoor arena at the YMCA on Saturdays and weekday evenings. For more information call Glen Vaughan at 298-3576.

Suwara said, "She's just such a good player that the whole team picks up when she's on the court."

ASU is led by first-year Coach Debbie Brown, a former standout as a player at USC. Brown said playing against quality teams early has helped prepare her team for the tough months ahead.

"I think our record doesn't indicate how well the girls have done," Brown said. "We've been working hard. I think the fact that we've had some tough matches already will work to our advantage."

Brown said the match with SDSU would be critical.

"I expect that they'll be fighting hard," she said. "It will be a close match. But I think that any match in our conference is important. I think we'll see a lot of splits between the teams in our conference this season. It will be close."

The Sun Devils are deep. Three seniors return from last year's squad, which finished sixth in the nation.

"I feel like we're a little bit stronger this season," Brown said. "We only lost one starter. I feel we're a lot more experienced than last year."

ASU's top returnee is outside hitter Lisa Stuck, a 6-0 senior out of Phoenix, Ariz. Stuck, the Sun Devils' co-captain, is a three-time All-WCAA player. She was a pre-season All-America pick in Volleyball Monthly. Last season, she led the Sun Devils in kills with 413 and in service aces with 45. Stuck has been a starter since coming to ASU as a freshman.

One of the most pleasant surprises for the Sun Devils so far has been the play of freshman Tammy Webb. The 6-0 middle blocker has stepped into the ASU line-up and has contributed offensively. She is currently second on the team in kills behind Stuck.

"I think her strongest area is her quickness," Brown said. "She's just made the team that much stronger."

MATCH POINTS—Health has not been a bright spot for the Aztecs this season. Himmer, out with a bicep injury for almost half the season, is finally coming back, but is not at full strength. Outside hitter Angela Rock sprained her Achilles' tendon in practice Wednesday. Suwara said he expects she'll be OK for the Arizona matches. Middle blocker Linda Eilers is nursing a sore thigh and is questionable for this week's matches.

tacular save that kept BYU from going on top 1-0.

"He did well overall," Clegg said.

I felt a little bit uncomfortable out there at first. I haven't been in there for a while," Garretson said. "But overall it felt good."

"Garretson looked good," Murray said. "Two shutouts in a row, that's a good sign."

"I'm encouraged. We're not making the bad mistakes as often. To prove we're a good team, we're going to have to beat a good team."

Clegg said that BYU has been the toughest team the Aztecs have beaten this year.

"By far this is the best victory," he said. "The biggest thing is the confidence we showed."

Ryder said, "We're really hungry now. That's what we needed. I wish we'd play UCLA now (the Bruins beat SDSU 3-0 last Friday)."

The victory puts SDSU's record at 4-3-1 as they go into a weekend road trip in the Bay Area. SDSU plays Pacific, St. Mary's and Stanford.

SOCCER STORIES—Freshman Chris Sullivan missed Wednesday's game with a back strain, but is expected to make the trip this weekend...Junior Bruce Cochrane also missed the game with a broken nose...Ratajczak's five goal effort on Sunday against Loyola gave him the SDSU school record for most goals scored in a game. Football game and Ronstadt are unappealing combination

I, for one, think that the $3 charge for next Saturday's football game (Oct. 8 against Long Beach State) is a crying shame.

Each semester we must pay a $15 activity fee that the Athletic Department assures us will get us into all the games free of charge.

They, of course, would never go back on their word, so, instead, they schedule a concert and hit us up for money.

Linda Ronstadt and football are about as appetizing a combination as Twinkies and beer. Even so, I wouldn't want to watch her sing the National Anthem, let alone a whole concert. I am not going to the game, and I urge all students to follow.

Adam Powell
Hebrew sophomore

Sports Editor's note: Those students that do not intend to stay for the Linda Ronstadt concert following the Aztec-49er game will be able to get a $3 refund with their ticket stub and proper SDSU identification, according to the SDSU Athletic Department. Refunds will be available to students at the beginning of the game's third quarter.

Aztec Sports Department wants letters

Will the Aztecs win the WAC in 1983? Are the SDSU Athletic Department's fiscal problems just about over? Will the San Diego Chargers' defense be able to hold opponents to fewer than 30 points a game this year? And what about the Dodgers? Can they hold on to the division lead, or will they set in the West again as they did last year?

These are but a few of the subjects that have been brought up in the sports pages both locally and nationally in recent weeks. What's your opinion on these or other issues relating to the world of sports?

The Daily Aztec sports section accepts letters from students, faculty, staff and alumni. Submissions should be typed and double-spaced if possible and should include the author's name, class and major or position at SDSU.

Letters should be dropped off at the Daily Aztec editorial office, located at PSFA-361, or mailed to Daily Aztec Sports Dept., San Diego State University, San Diego, Calif. 92182. For more information, telephone Kirk Kenney at 265-6979.

Schedules set for all baseball playoff games

Not all of the division winners in major league baseball have been determined, but the divisional playoffs and World Series schedules are already set.

The National League will start things off next week with a game Tuesday. Both leagues will be in action Wednesday and the American League teams will battle Oct. 6. Playoff games for both leagues will also be held Oct. 7 through Oct. 9 as necessary.

The World Series is scheduled to begin Oct. 11.

Blood

"My personal opinion is that there is no question that campus blood drives pay off. There's a big bunch of folks on this campus; over 30,000 people. It's a healthy, good population in an ideal age spectrum for blood donation," Patrick said.

The next stop for the bloodmobile near SDSU will be on Thursday, Sept. 29, at Alvarado Hospital. On Nov. 16, the Newman Center will again sponsor a blood drive, but it was unable to acquire Casa Real for the date, Rowlan said. It will instead be at the Newman Center, near Health Services.

Springfest, pending the survey's completion. At least three amendments were considered before final action was taken.

"A lot of people have re-evaluated their decision," Zola said. "They have fears and doubts about the project."

No determination was made on who will conduct the survey. A.S. Marketing Director Pat Connors will work out the survey's details.

"This will not be a direct student survey," Zola said. "It will include the community near the campus, students and faculty."

In other A.S. action, the council reviewed a resolution urging the university to establish a policy before imposing penalties for late fee payments.

The university announced Tuesday a $25 late fine on fee-increase payments not received by Oct. 21.

"We need to have a distinct policy so students know what's expected of them," said Jeff Weiss, science college representative.

To give members time to review the issue, the council voted to consider the resolution next week.

Memory

"For instance, rich can look like dollars. You can take the person's face and actually visualize the dollars all over his eyebrows. You wouldn't just want to repeat 'rich, rich, rich,' because it's not effective," he said.

What if the name is something more difficult, Markoff was asked, such as Gary?

"Gary sounds like carry," Markoff said. "You have to be creative, and you have to want to become involved."

Markoff said his system is not foolproof. It is just a tool to aid the memory, but an effective tool, he said.

Brad Nelson, 22, attended Markoff's class. "It's a very good system, and once you master it, it's extremely helpful," Nelson said. "It's a more long-term system. I now use things from my memory I don't even need. It will make it a breeze when finals come along."

In some ways, Markoff has become quite a celebrity since he mastered the memorization system 12 years ago, and now he is no longer a nervous kid. In fact, he's become somewhat of an exhibitionist, and he loves the attention he gets from his audiences.

"You get a lot of self-esteem, a lot of confidence and a lot of friends when you have the ability to remember almost anything. It's an ego trip, and it's powerful," he said.

Markoff's training session costs $100 or whatever a student can afford, he said. He will also be giving free mini-lessons today and Friday in front of the Aztec Center Post Office at 11 a.m. and noon. Those attending the Saturday seminar should preregister during the mini-lessons.
